International Situation Now Quiet

Douks In Southern Interior Starting On Rampage Again; Bombings And Firings General

NELSON, April 24: (CP)—One school was burned, another was bombed and unsuccessful efforts were made over the week-end to burn and bomb two other schools, a planing mill and a Catholic church in the Doukhobor settled districts of West Kootenay and the Grand Forks areas over the week-end. None were injured in any of the incidents.

The Champion Creek school was rased by fire. The verandah was blown from the Ootischenia school without injury to the teacher, Wilma Milne, who was in the living quarters at the time. Dynamite under the brilliant school failed to explode. The mill there was fired but it was discovered in time to be extinguished. Ties were burned at Grand Forks and an attempt to burn the Catholic church at nearby Canyon failed.

FUNERAL OF "BUN" SMITH

Many Paid Tribute at Obsequies Last Friday Afternoon

BURNS LAKE, April 24.—The remains of the late B. A. Smith were laid to rest Friday afternoon. Mr. Smith, known to all his friends as "Bun", was one of the leading men in this district and his jovial presence will be missed by many. Deep sympathy was expressed for his widow in the many beautiful wreaths and flowers which both covered and surrounded the casket. Rev. J. McCormick conducted the funeral service which was held in St. John's Church.

Before two o'clock the church began to fill and by 2:30 one hundred people were present. The opening hymn, "Lead Kindly Light," was followed by a prayer and psalm. Mrs. McCormick gave a beautiful rendering of that appealing hymn, "A Few More Years Shall Roll." The short address by Rev. J. McCormick dwelt on the certainty of life after death, relieving the sad tension of the atmosphere with a strong note of hope. The service closed with "Rock of Ages" sung with great feeling by the congregation.

W. Wilson looked after the seating and Mrs. Wilson accompanied the singing at the organ. The procession of cars following the remains to the graveyard was the greatest in Burns Lake for many years, practically the whole community attending with many friends from outside.

Palbearers were H. Brown, R. C. Commons, A. M. Ruddy, J. Brown, A. R. Brown and M. F. Nourse.

Wreaths and flowers were presented by the following: McCrea family, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Jewell and family, Guy and Joe, Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Commons, Dr. and Mrs. T. C. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. Oland and David, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Keefe, Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Loper, the Talbans, Mr. and Mrs. Neil Van de Veen, Native Sons of Canada Burns Lake Assembly, Mr. and Mrs. R. Australia Seeks Her Own Defence

And Be Ready to Aid Rest of Empire to Live and Wage War Leader Says

BRISBANE, April 24: (CP)—Australia could not again send an army to a European war, said Postmaster-General Cameron of the Commonwealth government, in a speech here.

Britain might be so fully occupied Australia would have to depend on her own resources for an indefinite period. Australia's first duty, therefore, was to defend herself and her second was to supply other British countries with the means of living and waging war.

"We have neither the resources nor the inclination to attack others, but we are mightily determined to defend our own, with apologies to nobody," declared Mr. Cameron.

HER WAYS QUEENLY

Princess Elizabeth Has Grown Up Fast—Likes Geography But Has Simple Pleasures

At Awkward Age

Is Already Enjoying Some of Privileges Reserved For Adult Royalty

By WILLIAM McGAFFIN Associated Press Staff Writer LONDON, April 24: (CP)—Elizabeth Windsor has reached the awkward age. Her 13th birthday last week found the blond princess grown tall—but it also found her acting with dignity becoming the probable future Queen.

During the absence of King George and Queen Elizabeth in Canada and the United States in May and June, the King's Office in the United Kingdom will be administered by a Council of State of which His Majesty's brother, the Duke of Gloucester, will be the head. At the same time, in the public mind, Princess Elizabeth, as heir-presumptive to the throne, will emerge one of the most important as well as popular royal personages in the British Isles.

Princess Elizabeth's behavior already suggests the queenly manner. She is fast becoming adept at the peculiar backhand wave used by "mummy" and "grand-mama queen" to acknowledge the plaudits of the crowd. She is prim and correct beyond her years, in vivid contrast to her eight-year-old sister, Margaret. Graduated from the nursery a year ago, Elizabeth was promoted from half socks to long stockings. She has discarded her hair ribbon. She wears shapelier shoes.

In general, in consideration of the fact the Princess is rapidly growing up (she is only an inch shorter than her mother) she is beginning to enjoy some of the prerogatives reserved to adult royalty. But she is not old enough to accompany her parents on their overseas peregrinations. Hence she won't be able to go to Canada and the United States this summer—much to her disappointment.

Lover of Animals Princess Elizabeth, who likes animals—and horses best of all—already has a law in mind "I ever I am Queen."

According to the story, once in a burst of ecstasy she exclaimed: "Horses have such a pathetic look. I don't know what it is about them that makes them look so lovely. If ever I am Queen, I shall make a law forbidding people to ride or drive on Sunday. Horses must have a holiday."

Still another reminder of her juvenile status is the nickname "Lilybet" which she has not yet shaken off. She has been known as Lilybet ever since her baby tongue failed to manipulate "Elizabeth" properly.

Elizabeth's transition from girlhood to womanhood is being reflected in numerous ways. In her education, for instance, she is now being introduced to such stiff subjects as constitutional history and administration. In geography she is branching out into a study of the dominions, her earlier years having been devoted exclusively to perusing the British Isles.

Probably she will continue to be instructed by various visiting teachers under the supervision of her Scottish governess, Marion Crawford, and her mother.

A six-year plan for finishing her education has been drawn up and submitted to the cabinet for discussion and approval.

It is understood that while her intelligence is "very satisfactory," the Princess is not a bookish girl and prefers to learn by doing rather

Special Service Functions As all travellers are aware, it is necessary to perform a number of service functions on all long distance trains operating in Canada. For this special occasion the number of men ordinarily required will be greatly increased in order to expedite the movement.

At divisional and terminal points where such service functions are performed, these forces will attend to the replenishment of the water supply, the ice supply, cleaning of the exterior of the cars and a complete examination of trucks, wheels and all operating parts of the train. The men being selected for this work are being chosen with the same care exercised in the choice of the engineers, firemen, conductors and trainmen and this care in selection is being extended further back to numerous other workers who perform duties in connection with signals, crossings and the maintenance of way.

British Ambassador To Berlin Returns There; Is Of No Significance

Great Britain's Recognition of Czechoslovakian "Snatch" Not to be Implied, Says Premier—Silent on Russian Negotiations

LONDON, April 24: (CP)—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today told the House of Commons that return of Sir Neville Henderson to his post as British ambassador at Berlin during the week-end in no way meant Great Britain had accepted the German annexation of Czechoslovakia. "No special significance" should be attached to the return of Sir Neville to Berlin said the Prime Minister. Sir Neville who was ordered to London a month ago to report on the German absorption of Czechoslovakia, had been given a short leave of absence and was now going back in a normal way.

The Prime Minister refused to discuss Anglo-Russian negotiations despite Labor plea for a statement "in order to influence" Chancellor Hitler's speech on Friday.

PARIS, April 24: (CP)—The French government struck at propaganda in Alsace-Lorraine today by outlawing three organizations including that of the Prussian-born autonomy leader, Herman Bickler. Spokesmen said that the action was the forerunner of widespread measures to assure French unity during the international crisis.

France is said to have urged Great Britain to adopt military conscription as the quickest way to obtain Russian support and ensure peace.
