Mr. Halterman reports that this has been a busy year for his company in the passenger business and also with logging and salmon canning freight.

Speaking of the future, Mr. Halterman said that his company had had plans in hand for some time for the building of new steamers for its northern services but shipbuilding costs today were such that it was impossible to proceed.

Tactics Win Praise

This memory stood him well in war college, for, when he left Lieut. Col. Foch, later to become marshal of France and Gamelin's only predecessor in supreme command of the allied forces, wrote across the record high praise of Gamelin's tactical flair.

In 1906, Gamelin was asigned to General Joffre's command and almost immediately Joffre began to lead heavily on his aide's strategic ability. When Joffre became commander-in-chief in 1911, he took Gamelin with him and in the pre-Great War days it was the smooth. quiet little major who studied his maps and warned of a possible attack through Belgium. Still more important, it was Gamelin who urged and wrote the order that started the counter-offensive on the Marne in 1914, rolled back the Ger- Phone 18 & 19 P.O. Box 575
