READ A NEWSPAPER

Science and invention have brought to today's youth a broader horizon, a fund of information and an understanding of world events undreamed of a few short years ago. How they absorb this knowledge, how their minds are moulded and their young opinions formed is YOUR problem! What better way is there to present a clean and true picture of today's world to your child than through the columns of a good daily newspaper?

By forming the habit of reading a newspaper your child will develop a broader general knowledge of world events, an enquiring thirst for complete information and a sense of balance that comes with knowledge. Through special departments, a good daily newspaper offers a wide variety of enter-news. Let a daily newspaper help your child build a better, more tolerant and more understanding attitude toward the tainment features for the young mind in addition to the daily.

future.
