FOUGHT GOOD FIGHT

No matter what anyone may think of the rights and wrongs of the civil war in Spain, it is plain to everyone that the defenders put up a good fight. As a result of the conflict the word "Spaniard" will mean something wherever it is spoken. They fought against tremendous odds. We must also say a word of praise for the Communists who left Canada to take part in a war in which they had nothing to gain but everything to lose. Some lost their lives, some their limbs and others their health but, according to all accounts, they fought well. While we think it would have been better if they had remained at home, we must admire their devotion to the cause they espoused. It is a pity that so much fine effort should have been wasted on a lost cause.

SHIFTING DIPLOMACY

It looks to us as if every possible effort was being made to break France and Great Britain apart. If this could be attained it would be an easy enough job, the dictators think, to tackle one at a time.

Then again it has seemed at different times as if Great Britain were trying to break the Rome-Berlin axis, not that she might fight and defeat them singly but that she might make them keep the peace.

However, the Prime Ministers of France and Britain have both made it quite clear to the world that their interests lie in sticking together. If one is forced to fight the other will also fight.

POSITION CLEAR

On his return to Victoria from the East Premier T. D. Pattullo made clear his position in regard to the crusade emanating from Toronto in favor of eliminating the provincial governments. He said that his government would resist too great centralizing of power in the Dominion but would co-operate with the Dominion in working out a solution of the Dominion's financial troubles. He regretted the campaign of the publisher of the Globe and Mail and did not think "Mitch" Hepburn would undertake so futile and foolish a crusade.

Certain dispatches last week indicated that Premier Pattullo might have favored the McCullough plan but these were evidently in error.

NOT AGGRESSIVE ENOUGH

An English clergyman visiting Vancouver gave it as his opinion that the churches in this country were not sufficiently aggressive.

It has been said that the best defence is attack. Presumably that is what the preacher meant. Also it may be said that the average person likes a fighter, whether it be in the church or in political life. That is one reason for the political success of Hon. T. D. Pattullo. He is a good fighter.

An aggressive church is bound to attract adherents so possibly the visitor's remarks may prove helpful in a country where we are apt to take things as they are and pause long and thoughtfully before making any move toward a change.

SPORT CHAT

Plans for building an "Olympic village" at Kappia, a Helsinki suburb, have been approved and provision made for the erection of 29 three-storied houses with a total of 2,500 rooms. A restaurant will be provided for athletes living in the "village" and a trotting course situated in the same neighborhood has been equipped as a training ground for athletes and members of foreign football teams. The exhibition hall where the boxing, wrestling and weight-lifting events will be held is situated next to the Olympic Stadium proper. At present the hall can accommodate 7,000 spectators but it is expected that 14,000 will be able to watch the contest when alterations are completed.

Fencing and sabre competitions will be held at the Westend tennis club and the cycling events will take place at an up-to-date velodrome capable of holding 12,000 spectators, which will be built at Kappia. The swimming pool will be situated in a wood to the east of the Stadium. It is expected that accommodation will be provided for 12,000. Women competitors will be housed in a nurses' training college which is being constructed near the Stadium, while work will begin next year on a new military cadet school where competitors in the fencing, riding, modern pentathlon and yachting events will have their quarters. Six hundred seats will be reserved for the press. The tickets will be allotted on the same principle as at Berlin in 1936. The system is that the press of each country will receive a number of tickets in proportion to the number of competitors at the Games.
