HORIZON ELUSIVE IN TESTS

Whole Universe Whirls Dizzily When Young "P. P. O." Goes Into First Spin Just To Learn How

WITH THE ROYAL CANADIAN AIR FORCE AT A TRAINING BASE, Dec. 18: (CP)—At 22 Canadian airports, provisional pilot officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force are receiving elementary training which may lead to their wings and a place in a fighting squadron of the Dominion's air armada. But the recruit's first task is bereft of all glamor—he must learn to swing a propeller without losing an arm or a leg.

After he has been assigned to an airport for his initial instruction at a flying club selected by the defence department, he keeps both feet firmly on the ground for long hours as he stands in front of a training plane and whirls the propeller blade with hands to kick over the motor, the aerial equivalent to cranking a car.

Then he climbs into the rear cockpit of the machine for his first instructional trip aloft. Ten minutes after he is in the air, the instructor yells back through the ear phones "You have control" and the student handles the stick.

The aspiring pilot must fly the plane straight and level. The idea is to keep the nose on the horizon and the wings level and most of them find out how elusive the horizon can be and how quickly a wing acquires a dangerous tilt.

Early Sensations

A youth who has just been through the elementary stage described for The Canadian Press what generally happens the next time up when the officer learns banks and turns.

"From the ground these turns, when properly executed, appear graceful and easy," he said. "But in the air the pupil finds it simple to get too much or too little rudder or bank and consequently slip or skid. All the time the instructor is talking and suggesting. Hold a little more off bank; less right rudder there; watch your bank and turn indicator."

"My instructor yelled once 'If you wanna commit suicide, go ahead; but not with me in it, you don't.'"

The students read and re-read the little red flying manual where the flying sequences are laid down and it is considered the most important text.

Takeoffs and approaches are learned next but it is the first spin that brings a thrill. The recruit described it this way: "The plane is deliberately spun in order to teach the flier how to react when this manoeuvre results unintentionally. The correction is one of the primary essentials of flying."

"There are few fliers who don't get a real kick out of their first spin. The ship is stalled, the rudder kicked in the direction required and then she begins to 'wind up' rapidly.

"The air pressure forces the pilot down into the seat while the universe whirls dizzily. Opposite rudder and neutral sticks are applied to bring her out and when the spinning ceases, the plane is put into a shallow dive and finally levelled out."

Hard Going

But invariably there is a desire for another spin and the student soon feels he can take a whirl at a solo flight.

It's a hard road the P. P. O. travels, however, even before he gets to the solo stage in his training. Stringent qualifications are necessary before he is even accepted for training. He must have a junior matriculation, be between 18 and 26 years old and be unmarried.

The medical examination is one of the toughest for any branch of the military forces and eye-sight must be perfect. For eight weeks he is trained in elementary flying and completes 50 hours in the air before he goes to Camp Borden, Ontario, for intermediate instruction and Trenton, Ontario, for an advanced course.

Timely Recipes

BAKED FISH LOAF

- 2 cups flaked Canadian fish
- 3/4 cup of dry bread crumbs
- 3 tablespoons of finely chopped celery.
- 2 tablespoons chopped onion
- 2 tablespoons melted butter
- 2 tablespoons lemon juice
- 1 egg slightly beaten
- 1/2 cup of milk
- 3/4 teaspoon salt
- sprinkling of pepper

Combine the first 6 ingredients; add milk and seasonings to the egg and combine with the other mixture. Bake in buttered loaf pan (3" by 8" is a good size) at 375 degrees F. for 45 minutes. Slice and serve hot with egg or tomato sauce or serve cold with tomato sections.

BREEZY PICTURE

Mystery and Action in Rollicking Comedy Starring Claudette Colbert and James Stewart

With breezy romance, gripping mystery and spirited action in a story which has many novel twists, "It's a Wonderful World," starring Claudette Colbert and James Stewart, comes as the feature picture for the first half of this week. It is a rollicking comedy said to be replete with entertainment values.

Stewart is cast as a young private detective hired to keep an irresponsible Broadway playboy out of trouble. When the millionaire is charged with murder, Stewart becomes involved. While attempting to seek a solution of the murder he escapes and is caught in the act by Miss Colbert, playing the part of a poetess. He enlists her aid and together they track down the real murderer after a series of daring exploits.

Others in the cast include Guy Kibbee, a minion of the law who invariably suspects the wrong man; Frances Drake, the scheming fifth bride of the playboy; Edgar Kennedy, Kibbee's dumb assistant; Ernest Truex, the millionaire play boy; Sidney Blockmer and Andy Clyde.
