The Letter Box

Editor, Daily News:

In Monday's paper you published a "not-so-goofy" letter by "Canadian" who listed some of the problems facing the Canadian people and then suggested that all that is required to overcome them is the "application of a severe dose of sound common sense."

I feel that "Canadian" is right—in a certain way. Whether or not he is right depends on how the common sense is used.

After all, if I were making a very substantial profit out of the continuance of situations which were causing hardship to large numbers of my fellow-citizens, and apparently there are many such people, I might consider it the essence of "common sense" to oppose any change which would benefit the country as a whole at the expense of special privileges I might hold. In that case, I might think that the railway situation is all right the way it now stands and that the national debt situation had better be left alone. If I were to take this meaning from Canadian's" letter, I might easily agree that we should apply a "severe dose of sound common sense" to the solution of our problems. Perhaps, unconsciously, I would think that, if more privileges were granted to me and others like me by the government or some other agency, a constructive forward step would have been taken to solve "our problems."

On the other hand, I might feel that the answer to some of our problems lies in providing measures the purpose of which is to benefit the nation as a whole. In this case I might wish to take a line of action distinctly different from that contemplated by the first point of view and still consider such action the "application of a severe dose of sound common sense." To which view does "Canadian" subscribe?

Your correspondent says that "no one seems to have the nerve to administer the medicine" of common sense and then calls for someone to do the job. Why doesn't "Canadian" do the job? Why pass the buck?

If he thinks the job of meeting all these problems is too large an order for him to handle, that fact can scarcely be taken as an excuse to sit back and do nothing. Solving national problems might prove too large an order in this case but surely there are a good many problems right in this community crying for attention. Anyone with reasonable powers of observation can see lots of them. And I will suggest that a constructive and successful attack on some of these will inspire other community groups similarly to apply common sense to theirs. In that way we should gain the knowledge and experience that will enable us later to deal with the larger problems effectively.

After ten depression years, isn't it about time we stopped looking for some economic or political wizard to legislate us out of our difficulties by means of a few magic laws? Isn't it about time we, the people, decided to roll up our sleeves, to tackle the problems right on our doorstep first to apply common sense in a way that will help the community and the nation as a whole?

I wonder if "Canadian" will accept the challenge to do something constructive here and now. Or is he merely the kind of person who will do nothing more than write letters to the editor?

MILITARY FUNERAL

Last Rites Observed This Afternoon for Late Norman Short—102nd Battery Takes Part

Military honors were accorded this afternoon at the funeral of the late Norman Sydney Short, well known and esteemed pioneer of this city who served in France during the Great War first with the 67th Battalion and later with the 102nd. Many friends assembled at the funeral service which was held in St. Andrew's Anglican Cathedral and fitting tribute was paid to the memory of deceased.

The service at the Cathedral was conducted by the dean, Very Rev. James B. Gibson, and Peter Lien presided at the organ. Hymns were "Abide With Me" and "Nearer My God to Thee." Mrs. J. H. McLeod sang "Beautiful Island of Somewhere."

Following the Cathedral service, there was a procession to Fairview Cemetery where interment was made with military honors. The "Last Post" was sounded by Buglar William Rance, there was a lament by Piper Sam Leslie, whose pipe band had taken part in the procession, and three volleys were fired by a party from the 102nd Battery in charge of Sergeant Alex Mitchell and consisting of Sergeant T. A. McWaters, Sergeant George Maddill, Lance Sergeant J. Mussallem, Bombardiers Duncan Miller and Walter Cross, Lance Bombardier H. H. Ward and Gunners J. Comadina, Victor Miller, Elmer Thompson, Arthur Phillips and George Dybhavn.

Pallbearers were R. E. Hudson, James Parkes, W. E. Denning, Fred Hardy, C. L. Youngman and Fritz Skjellum, all of whom had been comrades of deceased with the 102nd in France. Ex-service men had a special place marching in the funeral procession. Jack Preece, president of the Canadian Legion, was in charge.

Even a GOLDFISH has more Privacy

From seedling to sealed package, tobacco has no privacy. Except for its long sleep while maturing, it is forever under searching eyes and testing fingers — both alert in your interests. Experts scrutinize the growing crop and purchase with scrupulous care. Others, again, carefully examine and grade it according to rigid, high standards so that each leaf shall go to just that product for which it is best suited.

And, when the matured tobacco reaches the factory, eyes jealous for perfection watch every process. At each step in the manufacture, samples are put through still further exacting tests.

You enjoy the flavour and fragrance of your favourite brand because the tobacco industry employs thousands of expert eyes and fingers — and equips them with the latest inventions of science and the finest machinery — to guard and perfect your enjoyment.
