PRINCE RUPERT'S OBJECTIVES

One of the Vancouver Board of Trade visitors to the run but his parting shot was Peter Doherty refereed well and city this week seemed much interested in Prince Rupert's blocked. Scherk stopped a hard was greatly assisted by two lines: objectives. He remarked that the city at one time had a pulp mill as an objective. He said he had asked a number right. None had expressed any hope of anything helpful Ferguson hit the upright and impression. except the possibility of the setablishment of an air base at Seal Cove and the placing of a permanent air squadron there. Beyond that he did not see that the city had any hope. It was a sad tale and, evidently, did not impress the visitor. Asked as to the possibility of getting a highway through to the outside world, more than one said they were supporting a scheme for highway construction about cameron, Ferguson, Dickens, Bak-150 miles east of the city and that, in a few years time, er. MORE OBJECTIVES

The Daily News objects to these objectives. We suggest that one of the immediate objectives should be the establishment of a pulp mill in or near the city. Another objective should be the building of a highway to Terrace, well. The forwards did not show letting the people east of that point look after their own a great deal of combination, the section but with the co-operation of Prince Rupert, not best being H. If it is decided by the people of the city to abandon showing to the defence. We have refrained from asking for these things of recent vears because we felt that the first objective should be a highway to Terrace.

Twenty-five years ago the people of the city asked for a road around the island and, in response, a thousand vards of it was cleared and graded at a point about half way between the city and Kaien. This is now grown up thickly with alder trees which would make excellent fuel for stove or fireplace. Another objective might well be the popularizing of deep sea salmon fishing for sportsmen. This is something in which the hotel people might well co-operate. At Victoria where fish are not any easier to get than at Prince Rupert the sport has become very popular and is worth a great deal to the city. Other objectives might easily be planned that would benefit the city. A new museum would be a great thing for the city and so would further beautifying until every place in the city has a garden which tourists would like to see. The civic centre is a very worthy objective and by making living conditions better in the city will help to keep people who retire from flitting south. An active home building campaign should prove a great civic asset. Who has other objectives to suggest?
