WHAT'S YOUR HOBBY?

Usually when one meets an important person one wants to know what is his business. What does he do? How does he make a living? and then a few people come along and ask what does he give to the forld in useful service. Sometimes what he gives in really useful service is quite different from what he does for a living.

It is said that Sir Isaac Newton thought that his most important contribution to the world was his work on theological interpretation. Yet very few people know that he had religious opinions. The whole world remembers him Lexington, Kentucky, Rev. Ben for having discovered the law of gravitation.

A man's hobby may be the most important activity, in which he is engaged. We have known young boys take up motorboating or radio work in their spare time and gradually develop into experts in those lines. Many man has had to turn to his hobby for a livelihood when his regular business failed him.

For instance, it is quite probable that A. O. Morse of this city will be remembered for many a year after he passes on because of the wonderful wood carving he has done. Some of the pieces indicate that had he been trained Mr. Morse would have been an outstanding genius in that particular art. Wood carving is a splendid hobby.

Some people have no hobby. They cannot even play a Cricket Federation eleven by 101 game and, as a result, when they get older and possibly runs in a two-day match at retire from business life ends for them. With a hobby to keep up the interest in living many a man has spun out his life many years beyond what it would have been normally, from Turin 79 miles to Rome,

Prince Rupert boys will have an opportunity this and clocked them at 137 miles an winter to learn to work in wood and metal at the High hour. Man's air School. It will be a fine opportunity for some of them to develop their talents along that line.

WHAT IS COMING

The first wheat consignment is arriving for weight game between Kent and Surrey at day. The following players have testing purposes, a harbinger of better times in the wheat Blackheath. shipping business from this port. It is expected that more than the initial million bushels will be shipped this way during the season. At any rate a million bushels means employment of an elevator crew and further employment south African, of longshoremen and others if the ships arrive to carry it match here.

With the starting of work on the seaplane base at Seal Cove and the carrying on of the other work at the United States Olympic boxing mouth of the harbor and at least some wheat being ship- team, keeps in shape for the 1940 ped, the winter should not be such a bad one here.
