MORE COMPLICATIONS

Member of Audit Bureau of Circulations

The European situation becomes more complicated larly. every day. Russia has a trade pact with Germany and another with Great Britain, just signed and yet Russia is bringing pressure to bear on Finland after forcing Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania to come into her clutches and Sweden is also preparing, if necessary, to help Finland against Russia.

We continue our war against Germany because Germany was the power that started it all and gave Russia the opportunity of which she has taken full advantage. It looks now as if Russia will sit back in hope that Great Britain, France and Germany will wear themselves out and will then step in and control the whole continent. Once France and Great Britain are controlled, it will be easy enough to take Italy and Spain.

We do not think that Great Britain and France will be so weakened by the war as to become an easy prey for the Soviets but it is within the realms of possibility. With Europe given over to Bolshevism the United States would not be safe. So this war becomes an American problem just as much as a British and French problem.

What seems certain just now is that we are not likely to be fighting against Soviet Russia at least for a while and possibly not at all. Russia would scarcely make a trade pact with Great Britain if she planned to war against her in the near future. In the meantime our conflict seems to be confined to Germany. This will be a great relief to many people.

MUST EXPECT TROUBLE

We must expect trouble from Germany very soon. It is quite possible that country will try to force a way through the defended Maginot line but, if she does, it will be very expensive fighting. It seems as if the French and British were reluctant to try to force the Siegfried line because of the tremendous losses it would entail. The attackers are pretty sure to be the chief losers unless the ground is prepared by artillery in such a way that all defences are destroyed.

WOMEN REGISTERING

This week women who wish to help in war work of any kind if needed will be given an opportunity to register in order to show their willingness to do something. Some! women can drive cars, help with Red Cross work, do nursing or any occupation that will help the men in the present struggle. This is not a government movement but a national women's gesture which should prove very helpful.

Happiness to "live as we always wished to" came to the family of Mrs. Ronald Sutton of Qualicum Beach, who also won $80,000 on a half interest in a ticket on Contrevent, 1938 Cesarewitch winner, "It has brought us the happiness of being able to educate our says Mrs. Sutton. "What else could a happy family wish for?"

Mr. Sutton enjoys life to the full, too. He retired from his coal miner's job and spends his time doing odd jobs around his home.

The happiness a $150,000 first prize brought Mike Meehan of Kenora found expression in the payment of the debt on Notre Dame Church in his parish, for which he was rewarded with a medal of merit from Pope Pius. "There is happiness in being able to make such contributions and with knowing we are able to spend the rest of our days in quiet comfort." Mr. Meehan says.

Neighbors say that except for the added comfort of wealth, the Meehan's live much the same life as they did before Battleship won the Grand National last year. Bachelor's Success

The war has dashed hopes of thousands of Canadians to reap huge profits from the approaching sweepstakes on the Cesarewitch. which will be drawn October 25. Because of changed conditions for the race, officials have ruled there will be no major prizes. Each holder of a ticket on one of the 95 acceptors will receive slightly more than $4,000.

The prize will be split into units. as usual, with the number of units depending on the amount of money received. Each unit contains the 95 lucky tickets.
