Red Air Force and Navy Spring Into Action With Bombing Attacks as Army Crosses Frontier at Many Points in Sudden Move Early Today

Widespread Military Action Follows Diplomatic Rupture

Helsingfors Has Aerial Warfare at Once—No Delay in Using of Incendiary Bombs and Attacking Even Hospitals—Various Nations Critical

LONDON, November 30: (CP)—Soviet Russia and Finland are at war. Early today Russia launched the invasion when troops crossed the Finnish frontier at numerous points. Soviet air force bombers and warships also sprang into action with bombardment attacks along the Finnish coast including the capital of Helsingfors. Points of attack were widely diffused. Incendiary bombs were used by Russian planes. A hospital was one of the points that was struck.

It was at 9:30 a.m. Helsingfors time that the first Russian fighting planes appeared. They did not immediately bomb the city itself but dropped their missiles on a smaller community outside the capital. A Finnish government spokesman said cryptically: "It has started. The war is on." The people took to bomb shelters. All traffic was halted. Finland formally declared war on Russia following the invasion.

Within a few hours the Red forces had pushed across the Finnish border on the Isthmus of Karelian north of Leningrad. Warplanes had twice bombed Helsingfors and set the port of Viipuri aflame. Warships began seizing Finnish islands in the Gulf of Finland.

The Russo-Finnish crisis, which appeared to be rapidly developing into another phase of the European war, took a final serious turn last night when the Soviet formally broke off diplomatic relations with its little western neighbor, the Russian high command ordering the army and the navy to hold itself in readiness for instant orders to action. Announcement of the breaking off of diplomatic relations was made in a radio address by Foreign Commissar V. M. Molotoff. Shortly previous the Finnish ambassador to Moscow had been notified and handed his passports.

Meantime huge movements of troops and Russian air force planes were being made to the Finnish frontier and several Russian warships departed from their bases, presumably for Finnish waters. The warships had been exercising in the vicinity of Finnish islands which Russia desires for air and naval bases.

In his radio address, Foreign Commissar Molotoff declared that Russia had no desire to violate Finland's independence or her territorial integrity. To say otherwise was "vile calumny" on Soviet intentions.

The hostile policy of the present Finnish government had, however, made it imperative, Molotoff declared, for Russia to take steps to keep her security inviolate and to protect her own national safety, particularly with respect to the port of Leningrad. Finland had taken an irreconcilable attitude, said Molotoff, who suggested Finland was acting in the interests of foreign imperialists and war mongers. Russia could no longer tolerate the present situation.

"Russia only wishes to liberate Finland from its own regime," Molotoff asserted.

Dictator Joseph Stalin, in an article published during the day in the newspaper Pravda, placed the blame for the European war squarely on the shoulders of Great Britain and France. Their attack on Germany had been responsible for the

IN STRICKEN FINLAND

Russian bombers set the southwestern section of Helsingfors, capital of Finland, afire in the sudden land, sea and air invasion. After Soviet bombers had roared over the capital in successive raids, the sky was red with glare of burning buildings. The capital was completely blacked out tonight but blazing buildings provided beacons for enemy aircraft to continue destruction and carnage.

Finnish defence forces rallied quickly after the fighting attack and anti-aircraft batteries fought bitterly. It was estimated that ten Soviet planes were shot down, two in Helsingfors.

A Danish radio broadcast report from Helsingfors said that two hundred persons were killed in a new air raid on the Finnish capital at 7 p.m. today. Earlier in the day the number of dead and injured could not be immediately determined. Several bodies were recovered on the streets and from wreckage of buildings.
