Dr. Mandy Recounts Experiences as Member of Expeditionary Force

Starting with the effort to secure a place in the force. Dr. Joseph T. Mandy sketched the various stages 2 of the Siberian expeditionary force of the First Great War in speaking before the Prince Rupert Rotary Club last week. He told of shipping as a private from Victoria on the Blue Funnel liner Pro- 5 tesilaus along with about fif-John Currie & Son Officialy Ad- teen hundred others. He desvised of Being Awarded Work | cribed the troubles of the trip, the storm, the cold, the landing at a Vladivostok. At present classes are being assembled and other preliminaries and also to try to head off the spread of Bolshevism in that country. They found themselves much too late to achieve their object and were sent home.

Interesting was the description of Vladivostok. He pictured it as a city of one street strung around the harbor near the waterfront for about six miles. Running back from it were a series of lanes. Business! was very largely in the hands of the Japanese. In the winter the people there did not bury their dead but stored them in sheds until they 2 could be buried in the spring.

The force did very little fighting. There was a little sniping but it 3 did not amount to much.
