UNITED IN MARRIAGE

Miss Betty Cameron of This City Becomes Bride of Morley Patterson of Ocean Falls

In First United Church a pretty wedding was solemnized last evening at 8 o'clock when Elizabeth Lindsay, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cameron, became the bride of Morley Edwin Patterson, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Patterson of Ocean Falls. Rev. H. G. Funston, pastor of First Presbyterian Church, officiated. Mrs. E. J. Smith played the wedding music as the bridal party entered and left the church.

The church was artistically decorated by friends of the bride with masses of autumn flowers which made a pretty background for the ceremony.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, made a lovely picture as she entered the church to the strains of "The Bridal March." Her exquisite gown was of white marquisette crepe, a bolero with long sleeves edged with narrow ruching and a shirred high waist line, with long, very full skirt. Her veil was attached to a crown of orange blossoms. Her only jewelry was a string of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of rapture roses and white heather with streamers of Lindsay, Buchanan and Cameron tarran.

Miss Winnie Cameron, sister of the bride, was maid of honor in a Queen's blue dress of silk net with insertions of figured silk lace and matching shoulder length veil. Miss Kitty and Jean Cameron, also sisters of the bride, were bridesmaids. The former wore a peach flowered silk arganda dress, a bolero with short full sleeves and matching shoulder length veil. The latter wore a dress of orchid silk net, a bolero with full ruffled sleeves and a very full skirt with matching shoulder length veil. All three wore gold lockets, the gifts of the groom, and carried bouquets of pink and white carnations.

The best man was Ellis Patterson, brother of the groom. The ushers were Peter Cartwright and Sam Currie. The grooms' gift to the best man was a leather wallet and to the ushers, silver initialed belt buckles.

During the signing of the register, J. E. Davey sang "Because."

Over one hundred guests were entertained after the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents at 600 Thompson Street. Autumn flowers were arranged throughout the rooms. The bride and groom received their guests under a white wedding bell, assisted by the bride's mother, Mrs. R. Cameron, in a navy blue lace ensemble, with matching hat and corsage of roses. The beautiful wedding cake stood on a table decorated with pink tulle. Prior to the cutting of the cake by the bride, the toast to the bride was proposed by Rev. H. G. Funston and responded to by the groom, P. H. Linzey proposed the toasts to the bridesmaids which was responded to by the groomsmen.

Miss S. A. Mills and Miss Jean Harrison R. N., presided at the

Later in the evening the happy couple left on the Princess Adelaide for Vancouver enroute to San Francisco. For travelling the bride wore a fawn polo coat with brown accessories. Mr. and Mrs. Patterson will reside in Ocean Falls. They were the recipients of many beautiful and useful gifts which testified to their popularity. The bride has resided here since early girlhood and is well known and popular among the younger set. She is a graduate of the Prince Rupert General Hospital training school for nurses and is well known as a vocalist. The groom is in the service of the Pacific Mills at Ocean Falls.

WAS NOTED SPECIALIST

Dr. Harvey Cushing, Pioneer Brain Surgeon, Passes Away In Connecticut

NEW HAVEN, Connecticut, Oct. 7: (CP)—Dr. Harvey Cushing, pioneer brain surgeon, died here yesterday at the age of seventy years.

The medical world knew Dr. Cushing as a brilliant pioneer in modern brain surgery but the public came to know him for his writings, the "Life of Sir William Osler," which won the Pulitzer Prize in 1926 and the widely-read "From a Surgeon's Journal," published ten years later.

When he was graduated from Harvard with an M.D. degree in 1895, after attending Yale, there lay before him an unexplored field in brain surgery, especially as it dealt with tumorous growths. After much painstaking research for ten years he penetrated the mystery surrounding this phase of surgery; within the next 28 years he had reduced the danger attached to delicate brain tumor operations to a point where it compared favorably with major abdominal operations.

Performed Many Operations

In the twenty years that Dr. Cushing retained the directorship of the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital at Boston and was identified with Harvard, he performed as high as three and four eight-hour brain operations a week; collected some 2,000 brain tumors and stored them in bottles and taught 2,500 students from all parts of the world.

From 1902 until 1912, he was associate professor of surgery at Johns Hopkins University. Then Harvard named him professor of Surgery. While at Johns Hopkins the sharp-eyed, keen-minded surgeon introduced conservatism in the operating room and new procedures.

He developed the use of the cross-bow incision for operations at the base of the brain; decom-pressing operations in intra-cranial hemorrhages in the new-born and successful treatments for facial paralysis. His idea of the anesthetic blocking of the nerve trunks later became one of the fundamental principles of surgery.

His stay at Johns Hopkins brought him the friendship of Sir William Osler, distinguished man of medicine. Upon Sir William's death in 1919, Lady Osler appealed to Dr. Cushing to write her husband's biography. Unfamiliar with authorship, Dr. Cushing nevertheless tackled the task and from a mass of notes produced, in two volumes, a prize-winning classic.

At The Battle Front

The world war started while he was at Harvard and in the spring of 1915 he embarked for France, where he served with the British, French and later American forces. During this period he held the ranks of major, lieutenant colonel and colonel and was named director of Base Hospital No. 5, a Harvard unit attached to the British expeditionary force.

His war experience won for him the distinguished service medal awarded in 1923 by the United States government and out of it also came the absorbing book "From a Surgeon's Journal."

Back from the war, he returned to his duties at Harvard and the hospital in Boston where he remained until the age limitation ruling forced retirement in 1932.

The next year Yale named him its first Sterling professor of neurology. He was identified with the university in that capacity until his retirement in 1937, when he received an emeritus rating and became director of studies in the history of medicine and an associate fellow of Trumbull College.

He was born in Cleveland, O., April 8, 1869, one of nine children of Henry Kirke and Betsey M. (Williams) Cushing.

He married Katharine Stone in Cleveland, June 10, 1902. They had five children, a son and four daughters. One of the daughters, Betsey, became the wife of James Roosevelt, son of the President.
