THE BRITISH CABINET

The changes in the British cabinet, as announced in the latest edition of this paper yesterday, came as a surprise to most people in this country. It is presumed that Mr. Hore-Belisha was in some respects not satisfactory. He is a man with abundant energy and some originality. A Jew, he may be imbued with Jewish prejudices. His removal may or may not mean a change of war policy. It may mean a change of method. The change is probably made at the desire of the rest of the cabinet or possibly on the advice of the military or naval high command. It may also mean that the airservices are to be given more power of initiative instead of being controlled wholly by the army and navy. There are plenty of other things the change may portend but one guess is about as good as another.

Macmillan has always been unsatisfactory in the ministery of information and his resignation will be welcomed by the Empire press. Because a man is a banking expert does not mean that he is a good publicity man. In fact it generally means just the opposite.

TERMS OF SURRENDER

It is evident that some Russians are anxious to surrender since Finland is sending through distribution of leaflet instructions how to give themselves up and telling them the reward they get for their guns, airplanes and other implements of war. No such leaflets would have been distributed had not at least some Russians been inclined to surrender. We know now that many Russians have surendered and also that whole regiments had to be machine gunned to drive them into the conflict.

Now we hear that two million more men are to be sent against the Finns but if they are of the same calibre as the others they are not likely to be more successful than the first army.

HOUSES NEEDED

Houses are badly needed in Prince Rupert and the federal government has a scheme for loaning money at a low rate of interest to encourage the building of small houses. The difficulty is that no loan company has been willing to take up the offer of the government and make loans under the scheme. It is understood that renewed efforts are being made to try to make arrangements. We hope they succeed.

At the time when there was shipbuilding in Prince Rupert a small building society was formed to make loans to home builders. It was well patronized and the money was reloaned as fast as it came in so that the company was able to pay a good dividend every year. It was a great asset to the city as it enabled a number of people to build houses who otherwise could not have done so. It seemed a pity that the company was wound up. However, it paid back every dollar invested and seven per cent interest on the investment the last year.

It might not be difficult to organize a similar concern again. Some business people have intimated that they would be willing to subscribe to the stock. It might be an ordinary business corporation or a co-operative organization in which the member would have the borrowing preference. Possibly the latter scheme might be the better. Such an organization would enable local people to build homes for themselves, who otherwise could not do so.
