EDITORIAL

Happy as Never Before . . .

Now and then we read something that reminds us of our neglect. Of late we have been thinking so much of the soldiers, the sailors, the airmen and the children evacuees that we have almost forgotten what women are doing. Yesterday we drew attention to a phase of women's work and again today from Overseas we are glad to pass on to all our readers something more:

"Women have been doing grand things up and down the country from arresting German parachutists single-handed to darning soldier's socks. A woman doctor with the rank of Major has recently been appointed to the Army, the first woman to hold such a position. Another, a woman corporal in the W.A.A.F., dragged a pilot from his blazing plane and shielded him from a bomb, and thousands are working all day and every day in the week in munition factories and doing it with a right good will. We can't let down all the nations depending on us for their freedom. It's unthinkable. And we are happy as we never have been before. Nothing is so stimulating as a crusade and today we are all crusaders—every one of us. Nothing that can be done by the most iniquitous group of criminals the world has ever seen can keep back the dawn of a new and better and more Christian world."

Inspired by Heroes . . .

Back again to our soldier heroes, let us quote: "The Lancaster was sinking: hundreds were in the water, but the soldiers on board remained until the end. They were seen clinging as best they could to the side of the ship as she disappeared and could be heard singing together 'There'll always be an England.' How easy it is to read these words in cold print. But try to picture what it must be to face drowning suddenly, with no time to make any preparations, no time to write any last words, no time almost to think, and yet facing a horrible death, facing the unknown, and to be able to sing 'There'll Always be an England.' Thank God there will always be an England, but it must be a nobler and better England in the future, inspired by such simple heroes as these who are daily enriching our traditions."

KISS YOUR TIRED FEELING GOODBYE!

Peppless Many Suffer Low Blood Count—And Don't Know It.

The baffling thing about low blood count is that you can watch about as much as you ever did — even look healthy and strong, yet — you can feel as if you had lead in your legs, dopey, tired and peepless.

Low blood count means you haven't got enough red blood corpuscles. It is their vital job to carry life-giving oxygen from your lungs throughout your body. And just as it takes oxygen to explode gasoline in your car and make the power to turn the wheels, so you must have plenty of oxygen to explode the energy in your body and give you going power.

Get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today. They are world-famous for the help they give in increasing the number and strength of red corpuscles. Then with your blood count up, you'll feel like jumping up the stairs as if you were floating on air. Ask your druggist for Dr. Williams' Pink Pills today.

Ramblers—Carl Johnston (captain), Robbie Currie, A. Kiyoshi, David Stevens, Teruo Hinada, Buddy Morris, Melvin Thompson, Glen Spence (goalie), Scott Kennedy, Ryokichi Hayshi.
