LIKE A VICTORY

While the British and French have been driven out of! Belgium, the Germans in the action incurred such losses that it has in that respect been a victory for the Allies. Especially in the air has the advantage been to the Allies. !: As the men arrived home they were greeted as if they had! succeeded in winning a victory. The rescue was so spectacular that it has appealed to the imagination of thell people of the whole world.

And incidents that cannot be forgotten are little ones! such as that where British boats carrying the men home bombed and threatened with torpedoes and machine gun attack, took time off to stop and rescue Germans who were struggling in the water and who would have been drowned but for the assistance given them by their enemles.

ATTITUDE MUST CHANGE

While Germans were preparing for this war years ago, the British people, led by Ramsay MacDonald and other idealists, were trying to show the world that the British people were ready to lead in peace as well as in war. They reduced the strength of the army and navy and tried to inculcate the principles of peace everywhere. For doing this they have been branded as decadent, outof-date, a dying race, no longer fit to rule. Germany and Italy, Japan and Russia have taken advantage of this lapse to increase their strength, inculcate in their people warlike ideas and try to wrest the world leadership from the British Empire. These peace gestures must never be repeated. When the British and French have again asserted themselves they will have to teach the young people of the Empire that perpetual preparedness is the only safe! way.
