led even though the board and the clubs might not always see eye to Speaking of the local bird season, Mr. Cunningham said that the board was not satisfied that a flater season, as urged by the local club, would provide better hunting The board, however, was not greatly concerned which two and a half months of the year was used for bird hunting.

Stating that there were 40,000 licensed hunters in British Columbia, Mr. Cunningham stated that 1939 had been the greatest game revenue year on record. Due to better times revenues had increased over 50,000. Even this year was $20,000 ahead of last in licences. There had also been a decided increase this year in all kinds of game. As a result of an advertising campaign, the tourist traffic was increasing and there had been over 4900 inquiries. Due to new restrictions which had been imposed on firearms in the hands of tourists, there had been cancellations in tourist bookings out this had been rectified to some extent by later revisions.

Urges Greater Interest

Mr. Cunningham urged local also hunters to take greater interest in fine set of their association.
