VALUE OF MILITARY TRAINING

The value of military training to our young men has been mentioned in this paper several times. Gus Sievertz. in his interesting columns, speaks of the improved car- ules are failing far behind. Doubleriage, the smarter walk, the straightened shoulders of header features will be resorted to hundreds, perhaps thousands of young men on the streets. as soon as weather conditions be- IN THE SUPREME COURT OF BRITISH And this minor miracle has come about in the short time come more favorable. No games since enlistment opened in the new militia units. Of course have been played for a couple of in the Matter of the "Administration you expect it of the men in uniform. But so great has weeks now. been the change in some of the civilian soldiers whose drill is confined to time volunteered in evenings away from fied with the staff of the Anglican their work that some are scarcely recognizable. They carry to their work and to their daily tasks the new spirit that is in them. Esprit de corps has been born in a popu lation that was in danger of getting too slack and lazy. And with it has come a new pride in being Canadians." It is certainly something that was badly needed.

RESTRAINT OF TRADE

A combine in restraint of trade is illegal. Yet we find! all kinds of combines formed for the purpose of raising price of bar gold on the London umbia, this 29th day of July A. D prices or stabilizing prices and many of these are perfect- $37.54 per fine ounce ly legitimate. In fact, the government of the country encourages them. In southern British Columbia there have been organizations, backed by the government, for the purpose of keeping up the price of fruit, of potatoes and other products. In Prince Rupert the co-operative organization for the marketing of fish and on the prairies the wheat pools all were organizations in restraint of trade, or possibly it might be more appropriate to say they were for the purpose of arranging for the orderly marketing of products and particularly to prevent the cutting of pric-

Recently Mayor Telford complained that potatoes could be imported from the United States and sold in Vancouver at a lower price than British Columbia potatoes could be sold. That was the result of one of these so-called combines designed to give the farmer a higher price for his product.

The question of legality seems to depend largely upon who it is that combines. Most of the articles we purchase in the grocery stores have set prices. So with other articles we use in our daily life. The manufacturers in consultation with other manufacturers set a price they consider high enough to give them a reasonable profit. Soll with the farmers and fruit growers. If the price is too high there is usually a repercussion, often a substitute being found which is just as good. Even in the carrying. business the price charged is as much as the railways or steamships consider the commodity will bear.

We are all inclined to think our services are worth! more than we are paid, employers and employees, producers and carriers, fishermen and farmers. Dissatisfaction makes for progress but too much dissatisfaction causes dissolution.

SPORT CHAT

Fans who pack the Chattanooga Tennessee, ball park to be amused by Joe Engel's latest tomfoolery dream-up think Joe Engel is a clown. Baseball's Mr. Bigs think he is one of the shrewdest business men in the game today-not alone for his brainstorm stunts that draw the fans to see even a losing team-but mostly for his ability to pick up ballplayers at a song and then sell them for huge ! sums. Consider this example and you get the idea: Connie Mack in 1938 gave Engel $25,000-and a ballplayer for Dee Miles. One vear later Engel sold that ball-! player, a mere throw-in-on the Miles deal, for $36,000. His name l is Bill Nicholson and the Chicag Cubs are his present proud owners

Engel is known to fandom chiefly for his ballpark stunts. He once staged an elephant hunt, with natives and all the trimmings, in connection with a game at Chattanooga. Another time he rigged up canary cages in the stands. told the fans they could at least listen to the birdies sing if the play of his second-division club became too boring.
