Question Of Langu age - - -

Approximately one-third of the population of Canada is of French origin and a considerable proportion of these people are proud of their origin, their language and religion. They are to be admired for this.

The difficulty that arises is that some of the young men have been ill-advised and have refused to learn English. Now these young men have volunteered for service in the air force and they cannot take part in any offensive until they have learned to speak English. They are getting this instruction just now but it takes time to learn a language.

With the United States people all speaking English and with the rest of Canada doing the same, the Quebec people might as well make up their minds that sooner or later English will be the accepted language of the country. It is very desirable that they continue to speak French, if they wish, as long as they also have a working vocabulary of English so that they may not be handicapped in after life.

We suggest this not because we speak English and they speak French but because the general trend of the times is toward an extension of the English language throughout the world. Not to speak English is today a great handicap. In all parts of Canada and the United States except Quebec there seems to be a general desire to speak the language of the continent. It is heard on the streets and on the air and official documents are printed in the language.

Canadian statesmen, realizing the natural aspirations of the French Canadian people, have made French, equally with English, the official language of the country. We are not suggesting that this was unwise but we are suggesting that it is unwise to persuade the French-Canadian young people not to speak and write English as doing so restricts their activities on a continent that is almost wholly English in language. It often proves to be a lifelong handicap.

Watch Our Advertisers - - -

We are rather proud of the merchants and others who advertise in the Daily News. We are proud to have them because we know they will get good results if they treat the public right and we know that most of them do.

It is the advertisers who enable us to publish this paper. Without them we could not operate. Elbert Hubbard once said that any deal from which both parties did not benefit was immoral. We benefit from the advertising and so does the merchant or manufacturer.

It will be noticed that this paper carries a number of exclusive lines of advertising. That is because we have the circulation and it is circulation that counts both in the city and in the surrounding country. Our press run yesterday was 2210 of which about nine hundred went out of town.

We are always glad to increase our circulation because that helps our advertisers. We help them and then they continue to help us. They do not worry about our policy but they want people to read their advertisements. That is what happens in this newspaper.

CONVOY IS UNDER FIRE

German Planes and Long Range Guns Not Very Effective in Attack Upon British Convoy

DOVER, Nov. 2: (CP)—German planes and long range guns along the French coast fiercely bombarded a British convoy in the English Channel just before dawn. After an attack of half an hour, a dozen ships were seen steaming northward, apparently undamaged.

For half an hour heavy explosions at sea could be heard from southeast coastal towns including Dover indicating that the attack was on.

Cambrai Chapter Enjoyable Dance

Jolly Affair Held Last Night in Oddfellows' Hall With Upwards of One Hundred Persons Present

An enjoyable dance was held last night in the Oddfellows' Hall by Cambrai Chapter, Imperial Order, Daughters of the Empire. One hundred or so persons turned out and had a jolly time from 10 p.m. until 2 a.m. with music by Mrs. DeCarlo's Orchestra. At midnight delicious refreshments were served with Mrs. Lyle Swain in charge. Presiding at the door were Mrs. Blancher and the Misses Evy Rivet, Audrey Wrathall and Adele Mussallem.

FINE JOB BY WOMEN

Canadian Soldiers' Club Workers Give Reactions to Sleeping in Air Raid Shelter

By LOUIS V. HUNTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, Nov. 2: (CP)—Women workers at the Beaver Club, the Second Great War's London "dugout" for Canadian troops on leave, have been driven to the club shelter which they have converted into a temporary home. It isn't because they fear air raids or shrapnel showers but because they want to carry on as usual.

The devotion of the women workers drew warm praise from the club manager, Capt. H. J. Swetman, a Y.M.C.A. officer during the First Great War who came from Kapuskasing, Ont., to take charge of the club here.

"The ladies are giving cheerful service under extreme difficulties and often in the face of danger," he said. "They have not counted the hardships. They are keeping up the services since the London air raids started and all meals have been served on time. Hot meals have been served continuously. They are doing a grand job."

When the Battle of London heralded a series of increasing air raids that delayed them on their way to work some of the women, including a number of Canadians, solved the problem of being on the job on time by remaining in the shelter overnight. So pleased were they that they decided to stay longer. Rows of cots were set up in the vaulted underground shelter at the club and it was equipped with cooking and other facilities.

Finds Work Relief

Some of the Canadians spent almost a week at the club without going home. One of them, Mrs. Lalla Collier, formerly of Vancouver, was out of the club only once during the week "and I don't even know if my flat is still there." She stayed at the club after spending three nights in a public shelter, during the last of which she had to stand all the time.

"It was a marvellous rest after those nights in the public shelter, with people crying and babies whimpering" was the way Mrs. Collier described her first night's rest in the Beaver Club shelter.

The sound of dropping bombs and the terrific roar of hundreds of anti-aircraft guns doesn't disturb her sleep now. "I sleep through the gunfire without any trouble," said Mrs. Collier who is a voluntary worker at the club.

"I think it's a grand idea this sleeping in the shelter," said Mrs. Norman Mackintosh of Toronto. "We hear the ping-ping of the guns and the women all chuckle when they are fired. Isn't it wonderful?"

Mrs. Mackintosh is in charge of the Snack Bar and among her coworkers are Mrs. Gerald Portman and Miss Georgina Murphy, Mrs. Edward Pope of Ottawa and Mrs. Hugh Kindersley of Toronto. They did double duty when the Snack Bar turned from serving sandwiches to complete meals after the main dining room was closed to avoid the possible danger of glass falling from the skylighted roof over it.

Mrs. Marguerite Benson of Belleville, Ont., thinks the shelter home is rather a good idea.

"At least, we're here early for breakfast," she said. "Except for the gunfire I sleep very well." Her husband is in the R.C.A.F. in England.
