

PRYING FOR NAZI PLANE SECRETS

A British aviation sergeant mechanic is shown carefully taking a German bomber apart piece by piece. The plane is a Junkers 88, the latest type of German bomber. It was shot down by Royal Air Force fighters. While the expert works inside the fuselage of the plane, a camouflage net, into which are twisted tree branches and other greenery, protects him from the eagle eyes of other German planes who would like to "scuttle" the corpse of the bomber lest it be of any help to the Allies.

NO BETTER HOSPITAL

Million Dollar Red Cross Effort Has Produced Best Set-up Of Kind

By PAT USSHER Canadian Press Staff Writer

LONDON, July 13: (CP)—The finest military hospital in Britain shortly will be ready to receive members of Canada's fighting forces wounded in war.

Officers of the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps are convinced that the Canadian Red Cross Hospital, nearing completion in the quiet of the countryside, surpasses anything else of its kind here.

Built and equipped by the Canadian Red Cross Society, it will shortly be turned over to the R. C. A. M. C. which will staff it. The property, situated on a private estate, has been leased for a nominal rental of one shilling yearly.

Costing approximately $1,000,000, it has accommodation under normal conditions for 60 officers and 480 men. If necessary, it can take as many as 750 men.

Canadian newspapermen, on a visit to the hospital, found it occupied by an army of workmen. Construction began last January but frost delayed the foundation work for a month after that. Packages of equipment were being unloaded by men of the R. C. A. M. C.

Officers paid tribute to the work of the men of the unit—No. 5 General Hospital R. C. A. M. C.—in helping convey tons of freight from a nearby railway station. Captain Alec O'Hara, from Kenora, Ont., quartermaster of the unit, pointed to the big comfortable beds and described how they had been shifted from trains onto trucks, then onto trolleys, then taken on handcarts into the wards. All the packing cases were being salvaged, he said, and were fetching more money for the Canadian Red Cross than they originally cost in Canada.

The array of equipment includes tables and chairs from Stratford, Ontario, and mattresses from Montreal; wheel stretchers from Woodstock, Ont., and an operating table from Toronto. Sterilizing equipment was brought from Madison, Wisconsin, because none was available in Canada.

Especially impressive was the up-to-date kitchen. Its modern fittings were pointed to with pride by Capt. O'Hara. They include a battery of coke-burning ovens, giant steam kettles in which anything can be cooked, electric hot plates and a cold-room with capacity for a fortnight's supply of food. Heating, ventilation and humidity are controlled by special apparatus fixed to the ceiling.

In the kitchen, ready to go into action when the hospital opens, was a veteran soldier and chef, Corporal John W. Sharley, who used to live in Winnipeg. Corporal Sharley was a chef of the Royal Fusiliers in the first Great War and has resumed his old job for the R. C. A. M. C.

"I'm as ready as the kitchen is," he said.

Equipment Work Col. George Nasmyth of Toronto, deputy commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross Society in London, mentioned the complexity of the task of obtaining equipment and supplies for a hospital of this kind. He paid tribute to the way in which this had been accomplished. This purchasing job has been in the hands of Major C. A. Scott of Toronto, well-known civil engineer, who served in the last war with the Canadian Engineers.

Col. C. L. T. Arthur, well-known Winnipeg doctor, who served with the Canadian Forces in the First Great War, will staff the hospital.

The reinforced brick structure is laid out around a two-storey administration block. Every other section is one storey only. General Design The imposing white-pillared entrance to the administration block is surmounted with the Canadian coat of arms. A long enclosed corridor connects it with various departments. These include a special laboratory for Sir Frederick Banting, which will be completed to his own requirements, x-ray department, dispensary, operating unit, dining room and kitchen and officers' wards. There will be three operating theatres.

Back of the administration block is an enclosed courtyard and back of it again a corridor 865 feet long
