ploit by the Royal Air Force recently was that when a stick of British bombs overshot its mark and hit the famous beer cellar where Hitler spoke at Munich, starting a large fire, according to the British Pres Association. The Air Ministry, in a communique that day, reported military objectives in Munich bombed with the Royal Air Force flying more than six hundred miles and dropping bombs for more than an hour.

Communications and objectives dustrial sections of Italy are also cluding Milan and Turin. Informed sources in Berlin admitted that British planes had raided Munich but claimed that the alarm came after Hitler had comnleted his address to Nazi stalwarts To was in this address Hitler had boasted Germany was "prepared for future as never before" and "strong enough to meet any combination in the world." Der Fuehrer claimed that German production was the highest in the world and the Reich would soon have capacity of the rest of Europe added to its own The speech was not broadcast, apparently on account of all German radio stations being off the air through fear of the Royal Air Force. Keeping of German radio stations off the air is another regular effect of the British bombing.
