CARRYING BATTLE TO ENEMY

Great Britain is not defending her own territory but is carrying the battle to the enemy by bombing her various centres, burning her oil supplies and damaging her railways. This is seriously impeding the Germans in their attacks upon Britain. Not only are numbers of German planes being shot down but many planes on the ground at or near their airdromes have been destroyed. This bombardment is increasing in intensity every day.

LOOKING AHEAD

In his speech to the Empire on Sunday Prime Minister Winston Churchill intimated that in two years Britain would no longer be on the defensive but would be passing through the offensive stage. The British were unafraid and undismayed. That is the sort of talk we like to hear from the head of our government. It reflects the spirit of the British nation.

SPECIAL CONTINGENCY

One of the special contingencies that the Canadians are reserved for seems likely to be going to the defence of Ireland if that country should be attacked. While the government of Eire is not willing that British troops should land in that country at present, she is quite agreeable to help coming in case the enemy should attempt a landing there. It seems quite possible that Ireland may become the first battleground between the British and the invaders.

UNCOMFORTABLE POSITION

Recent moves by Britain and the Soviet have put Italy in an increasingly uncomfortable position. Italy gambled on her ability to time her plunge into the war so shrewdly that she would secure a large slice of the victor's spoils without having had to fight a really serious war to get them. This has nothing to do with the unpopularity of the war itself among Italians. Mussolini knows all too, well that inescapable economic facts make it impossible for Italy to fight a long war against any supreme naval power. That is why Britain's coup, in preventing the French fleet from falling into the hands of the dictators, or their stooges in France, is probably one of the most decisive actions of modern times.

The ball is usually gripped between the first and second fingers and the thumb. The fast ball is usually thrown with a snap of the wrist. The curve ball, thrown with an outward rotation of the hand and arm, spins out of the hand between the thumb and forefinger. Both deliveries should look alike as much as possible. Wise batters will spot any deviation.
