COMPULSORY MILITARY TRAINING

There is a growing feeling in Canada and the United States that in a democracy military training is not only; desirable but necessary to its existence. Young boys of from eighteen to twenty years of age can well afford a year of their lives to engage in intensive military and physical training, including a certain amount of technical training that they would not otherwise obtain. The better house for a shelter during an air this training is done the less likelihood we shall have to raid over Wates when a bomb exfight on this continent, unless we are already too late in | ploded and blew her and her huscommencing. Naturally this training would have to be band through the front door. compulsory and no amount of pull or wealth should enable parents to evade their children taking it. Flosing it is parents who are responsible for the physical condition and FOOTBALL published on this continent south of the line says:

"We are witnessing one of the great convulsions of history, such as man has endured every century or so in | 1. the past. No man can tell how it will end. But for some time to come Americans will know what it is to live dangerously, as our ancestors used to do." This convulsion of civilization, if we may so call it, is changing the mode of life and the thinking process of every citizen. The whole outlook of the nation is changing and the change is not! yet complete. Older people must adapt themselves to this! new outlook or they will drop out of the race altogether. Younger people are already changed but they need guidance and we know of no better method of guidance than FOR RENT-First class room and to have them put under military restraint for a year. With that restraint comes development for military life is not! at all what it used to be. It will not only provide the technical education which is today so badly needed but it will FOUND-Brooch. It will enable the young men to meet all other kinds of young men and to adapt themselves to the conditions under which they find themselves.
