EDITORIAL

COUSINLY DIFFERENCES

In the past there usually have been cousinly differences between the British and American peoples. cans have been critical of the British tone of superiority, Various little family differences have arisen such as the Cigarette Papers to the outsider that there was a break that could not be healed. Now the common cause of freedom has brought, the countries together and we find Americans far outstripping Canadians in their efforts to serve the British! cause by knitting socks for the soldiers, providing canteens and in dozens of other ways.

Evidently the people of the United States expec Great Britain to win or they would not send them materia: which is badly needed at home. If Britain were overcome! the loss to United States in material would be almost as great as was the loss of material to Britain when Flan- FOR RENT-First class room and ders was evacuated.

One effect of the war has been to draw United State: and Canada closer together than ever they have been in FOUND-Brooch. Owner can have the past. They have come to realize that each is necessary to not only the success but even to the safety of the other. In the past there have been many trade annoyances, such [as the imposition of tariff walls one against the other. Possibly before the war is over the tariff walls may have WANTED-A 2 or 3-room cabin by been wholly demolished.

Americans are discovering to their amazement that they are not as efficient as they thought they were. Britons are discovering that they have nothing to feel superior about. Canadians are realizing that just as the boundary between the two countries has been unobstructed for one hundred years so the tariff and other restrictions! might just as well be abolished and the two countries exist side by side, free from annoyances of any kind. Many things may happen before the war is over or before the in the supreme court of British after-war settlements have been completed.

GULLS OBJECT TO GERMANS

The British seagulls do not like the Germans. When the Nazi planes come zooming in, the gulls go out to sea. . The result is that the British cannot be taken by surprise, or the supreme court in and for the The gulls always notify them that the enemy is coming. County of Prince Rupert acting in the It has been suggested from this that, as the geese are said Honor Judge Fisher. I was on Augus once to have saved Rome, so the seagulls may save Britain from the machinations of the Nazis.
