PERSONALLY CONDUCTED TOUR

No less a personage than Prime Minister Win ston Churchill himself showed Harry Hopkins how England intends to defend herself if Hitler attempts his long-threatened invasion. Premier Churchill is shown here, wearing an old naval pea jacket and cap, with Hopkins during a visit to a northern naval station. It was on this occasion that Churchill made the out-and-out prediction that Britain would win the war, provided the U.S. came through with the promised aid. The personal envoy of President Roosevelt broke his official silence in an address to an air raid precautions group on January 17. What he said was not revealed.
