Prince Rupert's Choice?

GEORGE WEAVER, C.C.F.

Only One Choice-

Difficult To See How Electors Could Choose C. C. F. Over Proven Government

From the point of view of the elector, it is difficult to see what other party offers him practical benefits equal to those he is likely to get from a continuance of the Liberal regime. Certainly its policies bear comparison with either of the other parties; it is undoubtedly superior in administrative and executive talent and experience of governing. Its patriotism cannot successfully be challenged and neither of the other organizations cling so closely to the principles of democratic rule. The patriotic appeal of the

In the line of concrete accomplishments, of course, no comparison is possible. The Liberal party has a solid and imposing record of accomplishment to point to, while, through the force of circumstances, the opposing parties have nothing but their platforms to fall back on.

Having considered the men and the parties between which they must choose next Tuesday, the electors should not find it hard to make a choice.

The C.C.F. is supported by an organization that believes it can fool the electors by distorting the truth, shouting "Lie!" whenever it is faced by the uncomfortable facts of its own past record, and serving up a warmed-over mulligan of discredited Marxianism and George Bernard Shaw Socialism that neither Socialist, Communist nor any other type of radical economist could honestly endorse.

terances and criticism of the present government.

The economic theory of the C.C.F. is an odd one. Professedly socialistic, it has declared for the socialization of beer, but not bread or milk, which seems to be in direct contradiction of the Socialist doctrine that the necessities of life are the first commodities which should be nationalized. It advocates benefits for farmers and co-operative marketing of farm products, yet declares that the government will (if it becomes C.C.F.) take over complete ownership of farm products and (according to the latest prophet to appear here, who emphasized the point) EVERY means of production, which certainly would include farms. And, of course, it regards government ownership as the complete solution of all ills, though it fails to state how it proposes to overcome those specific ills which experience has industrial and commercial en- (CCF).

C.C.F. is, of course, one which it is at liberty to make, but which it finds rather difficult to support in face of the facts.

Electors' memories are by no means as short as the C.C.F. wishes they were, and it is hard to convince people who recollect that Mrs. Steeves said, "There is nothing to choose between Britain and Germany," who remember the C.C.F. campaign against sending any men overseas, and who recall some of its representatives in the legislature who refused to assist the War Savings Drive-it is difficult to convince them that the patriotism of the C.C.F. leaders is of much longer standing than the present election campaign. In some cases, however, it must be allowed that this sudden upsurge of flag-waving dates from Russia's entry into the war, a coincidence which the party de-The C.C.F. bases its appeal on clares is quite incidental.—Prince Uphill (Lab).

What Is The Record?---

This is what Premier T. D. Pattullo said at the Sirois Conference (page 81) official record:

"I would rather have the Dominion Government take any action, AND I INVITE THEM TO DO SO, FOR THE PROSECU-TION OF THIS WAR, than to have them take away those rights which we have in perpetuity."

Mrs. Steeves of the C.C.F. stated that she hoped that there would be no British Empire after the war; that she could see no difference between the British and the Germans.

Now the C.C.F., with Mrs. Steeves still running for them in this election, say "Victory Abroad."

Can The Leopard Change Its Spots!

To the Electors of Skeena:

On the eve of Election I take this last opportunity of asking you for your support at the polls. Owing to great expense and lack of time I have found it impossible to visit all points in the riding and meet you

If elected as your member I promise faithful service, no vicious patronage and favoritism, and to keep from doing business with the government myself.

on a basis of equality. I am signing this as am best known in the district where I have resided for 35 years.
