Black-Out Has Tendency of Slowing Sales in Local Stores for Christmas.

Christmas shopping was going along in Prince Rupert at a volume well ahead of last year ow-Flying Officer T. Chase-Cas ing to increased population and increased purchasing power on acount of war-time activities until the Pacific war scare and the black-out came along this week to cause a definite falling off. By next week, however, it is believed there will be a settling down with probably a gerat rush of buying during the final few days before C. King, Inverness; J. H. Traver Christmas than has been experienced in years.

All gift lines have been sharing in the increased trade, sellers of the various commodities reporting larger sales until this week's war developments brought the conflic closer to these shores.
