Talk to Dolls Cure for Fear

Janet of Bristol Hospital Finds Way to Pass Time in Air Raids.

BRISTOL, Nov. 3:—Three-year-old Janet, who was in a Bristol hospital when it was bombed, cured herself of fear of air raids by talking to her dolls.

Dr. Frank Bodman, deputy director of Bristol Child Guidance Clinic, describing the case in the British Medical Journal, said that for three weeks after the bombing Janet woke up terrified every time the sirens sounded.

At the end of that time she was heard telling her dolls how the bombs fell the night the hospital was hit and how the windows were shattered over them. She told the story night after night and gradually her fear of the raids lessened. Now, Janet wakes only when the barrage is particularly heavy.

LONDON, Nov. 3:—Germany claimed today that the Russian army of Crimea, split by land and air assaults, was trying to leave the peninsula through Black Sea ports of Sebastopol and Kerch. Hitler's command pictured the Russian retreat there as a near rout. In the Donets Basin to the north the industrial city of Kursk was reported to be in German hands.

Although the Russians acknowledged that the siege of Moscow was becoming grave, Red army despatches reported the recapture of the northern section of Kalinin, 95 miles from the capital on the northern flank. They said thousands of Germans were buried under flaming debris of houses blasted by the defenders. Reuters reports from Stockholm today said German and Finnish troops were only fourteen miles from the Russian Arctic seaport of Murmansk.

Another Reuters despatch said heavy gunfire was heard in the Baltic which led to the belief in Stockholm that the Soviet fleet was trying to shoot its way out from Hango, the peninsula fortress off Finland.
