Today there was knowledge that the early followers had not possessed. In the middle ages the Jesus of history had become the Christ of theology and a supernatural being. Today Jesus was known as the Man of Sorrows inspired by God. As a result of that knowledge must be seen the need for action. There was plenty of expression today but much of it did not answer Christ's challenge to

Mr. Jackson suggested that there were three ways in which men should pay the homage that was reserved for Christ alone. It was not enough, however, to pay homage, such as was celebrated at Christmas if it was not translated into Christlike action.
