But it was Princess Louise, fourth daughter of Queen Victoria, who in 1878, brought to Canada a great impetus to cultural development. A painter and sculptor herself she established the Royal Canadian Academy of Art, the Society of Decorative Art in Montreal, the National Gallery in Ottawa and numerous other educational and artistic organizations. Interested in women's problems and education she was; one of the first to advocate teach-; ing domestic economy to women."

The Marchioness of Lansdowne came to Canada in 1883. She divided her time in Ottawa, Montreal Toronto and Quebec and took great interest in the development of the theatre. She loved outdoor sport and encouraged skating carnivals in Montreal which became

Perhaps best remembered in Canada is the Countess of Aberdeen. "A dynamo of drive and energy, yet ( she had a remarkably sweet disposition and the broadest sympathies' is the way she has been described. She organized the National Council of Women, the Victorian Order of Nurses and the Maycourt Club as well as giving a helping hand to every welfare and charitable organization she came in contact

Lovely, slender Countess of Minto won an instant popularity among Canadians who admired her beauty, her vivacious temperament and her magnificent skating. The Minto Skating Club in Ottawa was founded by her.
