RESUMING OLD TIME

Daylight Saving To Be Resumed Tonight, Much To Relief Of Many Local People

At midnight tonight daylight saving time, which has proven unpopular among not a few Prince Rupert people owing to the confusion it has caused because of non-conformity, will be discontinued and tomorrow, after setting the clocks back one hour, all will be operating uniformly on Pacific Standard time again.

Daylight was put into effect this year ostensibly to speed up war industries but it was only partially adopted.

The feeling here is that there might not be much objection if the change were made universal but, if it is only going to be partial, standard time might as well be retained and the industries, if one hour earlier.
