Fred McKay of Greenville, conductor of the famous concert band, is in the city for the Native Brotherhood convention. He says the band is not only holding up its well known high standards but even improving on them. The band has 48 silver pieces that cost $8000. Each instrument is in use and practices are held regularly twice a week.

Reference was made at the meeting of the Prince Rupert Chamber of Commerce Monday night to the convening of the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia in Prince Rupert this week. Members expressed pleasure at the convention being held here and the hope that it would be successful. It was mentioned that a collection had been taken up among the retail merchants to assist in connection with the convention costs. Assistance had also been given by the Chamber in finding a meeting place and living quarters for the delegates while in the city.
