Prince Henry Scores Naval Victories— Salmon Pack Biggest in Years.

The Pacific Ocean despite its sprawling thousands of miles, is "home waters" to British Columbia's seamen.
With the marking of "Navy Week," under the sponsoriship of the Navy League of Canada, British Columbians will be able to mark the Royal Canadian Navy's successes in "home waters" with as much pride as they feel for the navy's work in the Battle of the Atlantic and in the Battle of Britain. All Canada knows of the first prize of war made by a Canadian warship. She was the German merchant ship Weser, captured in the southern Pacific after a warning shell across her bows had brought her to a sullen stop, and a boarding party from Canada's armed merchant cruiser Prince Robert had swarmed up her side and taken control above and below. Her capture was a double victory for the Canadian navy, for not only did they lessen Hitler's merchant fleet by a very valuable unit, but they added this valuable unit to the merchant navy which is Great Britain's life-line. All Canada does not yet, however, know of another double victory by a Canadian armed merchant cruiser, in this instance H.M.C.S. Prince Henry, sister to H.M.C.S. Prince Robert. In one day Prince Henry intercepted two German ships, after a long period of skulking in a neutral South American harbor, they endeavored to run the blockade imposed by the empire's navies, of which Prince Henry was a worthwhile component. When the day came to an end, the two Nazi ships were at the bottom of the Pacific Ocean, into which they had sunk, ablaze from stem to stern after their crews, in German tradition, had set them afire. And the closing of the day saw H.M.C.S. Prince Henry on patrol once more, this time with half a hundred or more German seamen held as prisoners of war.

So, in briefest form, the tale of one day's effective blow to Nazi hopes given by a ship of the Royal Canadian Navy. The full tale yet awaits release: it is a story of seamanship and decisive action which deserves a page of its own in the gallant history the Royal Canadian Navy is writing for itself with its exploits at sea. Neither, when presented as one day's work, does the story do justice to the tremendous task so willingly, and so capably, undertaken by Canada's seamen. Canada's seamen could tell of days and nights, stretching into weeks and months, of steady, monotonous patrols in the Pacific Ocean; of days when there was not a smudge of smoke to bring variety to an apparently empty ocean, and the ceaseless watch grew wearisome indeed. Vigilance, however, has never relaxed and, in calm or in storm, the Canadian Navy has kept the seas so that the seas shall be free of the enemy. Bringing home a prize of war is most satisfactory, but there is a true satisfaction, too, in the knowledge that the monotonous patrols which led to such captures, have been well and efficiently performed. The West Coast, too, has seen another phase of the Navy's work—the protection of its own coast line. British Columbia's coast, with its indentations and islands, hidden bays and sheltering points is a naval problem in itself. The islands have a coast-line of 3,980 miles; the mainland a coast line of 1,380 miles, or a total of 5,360 miles over which to keep watch and guard. The Navy tackled the problem and the coast is secure.

The British Columbia coast salmon pack in 1941, totalling 1,795,189 cases up to a couple of weeks ago, was the heaviest in many years. It compared with 1,225,156 cases which was the pack for the year 1940. The Skeena River pack, of 363,455 cases was the largest since 1936 when 369,353 cases were put up. The Naas River pack was 35,694 cases compared with 24,944 cases in 1940 and 39,336 cases in 1939. The Skeena sockeye pack for the current season was 110,332 cases compared with 132,407 cases last year; the spring pack, 5,891 cases compared with 7,253 cases; the steelhead pack, 2,207 cases as against 124 cases; the coho pack 120,903 cases as compared with 80,821 cases; the pink pack 73,901 cases in comparison with 89,591

Union steamer Cardena, Capt. John Eoden, arrived in port at 10 o'clock this morning from the south, sailing at 11 a.m. on her return to Vancouver and waypoints.

To pay a visit of inspection to the progress of the extensive program of shipbuilding which is under way at the local plant, G. A. McMillan, manager of the Prince Rupert dry dock, arrived in the city on the Prince Rupert yesterday afternoon from Vancouver.

Percy Hudson sailed this morning on the Cardena for Vancouver. He was to have taken the power cruiser Kavema from here to Ocean Falls for Dr. W. S. Kergin but the vessel blew up and burned last Sunday morning at the floats of the Prince Rupert Rowing & Yacht Club when about to leave.

C. P. R. steamer Princess Louise, Capt. S. K. Gray, northbound from Vancouver to Skagway in the course of a regular Alaska voyage arrived in port at 11 o'clock this morning from the south, sailing a couple of hours later for the north. She is scheduled to call here next Wednesday afternoon southbound.

EVEN WITH WAR ON!

LONDON, Oct. 25: (P) — Lionel Watson, 31, was sentenced to hang when convicted of murdering his bigamous wife and her 18-months' old child who were poisoned and then buried under flagstones in a garden.

WHEN IT STARTED

First woman to receive a degree from a Canadian College was Miss Grace A. Lockhart, given a B. S. degree from Mount Allison University in 1875.

"ONE NIGHT IN TROPICS"

Music, Comedy and Romance Combined in Picture at Capitol
First of Next Week.

A fast-moving and colorful romantic comedy, "One Night in the Tropics," coming at the first of next week to the Capitol Theatre, combine popular music, hilarious comedy and romance.

Story of the film presents Allan Jones as a young insurance man with Robert Cummings as his best pal. Cummings is engaged to marry Nancy Kelly, but his ex-girl friend, Peggy Moran, proves a stumbling block to the marriage plans.

Romantic mix-ups which ensue when Jones sells Cummings a million-dollar "love insurance" policy provide the basis for numerous comedy complications.

Jones sings in effective style three of the five Kern numbers which comprise the musical score. Bud Abbott and Lou Costello inject hilarious comedy into every scene.

Mary Boland, Leo Carrillo and William Frawley are importantly cast and deliver their usual bright performances, and others who appear are Nina Orla, Richard Carle and Don Alvarado.

Jones sings "You and Your Kiss," "Simple Philosophy," "Your Dream" and joins a singing ensemble in the "Farandola." The latter provides the theme for a huge and colorful production number in which Vivian Fay, noted ballerina, and The Theodores, famous dance team, provide thrilling specialties.

Both the Misses Kelly and Moran, make singing debuts, the former singing "Your Dream" and the latter "Remind Me."

High School Dance Delightful Affair

One Hundred and Fifty Young Folk in Attendance at Event in Odd Fellows' Hall.

The first of what is planned to be a series of dances for students of Booth Memorial High School was held last night in Odd Fellows' Hall. The event was appropriate to the Halloween season and the hall was attractively decorated in black and gold with streamers and drawings fashioned by the art class. About 150 young folk were in attendance.

Dancing was in progress from 8 p.m. until midnight with excellent music by Mrs. Jean DeCarlo's Orchestra.

In the course of the evening, Principal W. W. C. O'Neill made a few suitable remarks.

William Bond, president of the Students' Council, was master of ceremonies and Gordon Calderwood and Bill Hunter presided at the door.

Delicious refreshments were served with Miss Ven Der Mark directing this important feature.

N. B.'S NATIVE SON
