Even a movie scenario writer the games more interesting. ouldn't have improved on the Albany, Ga., who captains Duke's ils of United States football. It ing. was playing Georgia Tech in Atlanta. Bulky Bob was a fourthpound sophomore with hands like hams and feet to match.

Duke had a 7-6 lead, but when Georgia Tech started running wild in the last period, the one-point margin looked mighty shaky.

Then a groan went up from the |Duke supporters. Their firststring centre was hurt and had to

You know how it goes in the movies. Well, that's exactly what happened. Coach Wallace Wade looked over his substitutes. There was Bob with that "put-me-in coach" determination written all over his pan. Wade walked over to him, whispered something in his ear, and slapped him on the ample seat of his trousers. If Barnett was scared, he didn't show it. He spit on his hands and took his place backing up the line. Almost single-handed he halted the Tech running game. Then he put the contest on ice for the Blue! Devils by coming in to intercept a pass which looked like a sure touchdown.

When Bob left the dressing froom after the game his name was in the headlines of the sports extras. It's been there ever since. He's one of those tanks who like it best when the going is tough. He's as quick as a scatback at passes, and the way he backs up the line is positively brutal. He learned all-Southern honors last! year, and the climax to his scenario-like career came when he was elected captain this year.
