Letter Illustrates What They Have To Put Up With Now

The following letter, received by a local lady, shows what they have to put up with in England these days while Canadians are only asked to invest savings in three percent Victory Bonds:

"So much time seems to be spent in shopping and, if you do not go each morning, you miss whatever happens to be going but it does take up so much time. For instance, yesterday morning I was ever so busy and, just after 11, my neighbor called me and told me the butcher had got a few sausages and, if I wanted any, I had better hurry along. She would have brought them but the butcher wanted me to choose my joint. This week we are allowed a shilling's worth of meat each so I chose half a leg of mutton which came to 3 and 1d. That was put away for me for tomorrow and I was allowed one-half pound of sausages which I brought home. This morning I had to go around to the dairy to see if I could get any eggs. I managed to get three. I shall not get any more until clams and oysters of the United cheese, one ounce per person per week. I expect biscuits will be the for a long time. All dried fruits gan have so much acidity in my system so I have to have honey and now

We now have one-quarter pound ounces but only one-quarter ounce of margarine, instead of a halfwhat we gained on the rounda-bouts, we lost on the swings. Sweets are not very plentiful, especially milk chocolates and the" are just double the price. Apples are 9 pence and one shilling a pound. Haven't seen a banana for months. Still as long as we beat the Germans and win this war, that is all that matters.

Present-Day Soldiers Carry Them on Their Shoulders Instead of Shields

LONDON, June 19: (CP)-Mod-The sale of monocles in the ern war has its heraldry just as had the war of King Arthur's ions are carried on the shoulders of he fighting men instead of on their shields.

An observer tells of attending a troop broadcast. "There were men on leave from all regiments, units and countries of the British Commonwealth, gathered impromptu from the Y.M.C.A. and other clubs for servicemen.

"Every man present bore on his shoulder a different, mystical badge that had apparently no relation to his regiment, such as the Royal Ar-(145) tillery, the Toronto Scottish, and
