Conservative Leader's Views - - -

Hon. R. B. Hanson, premier leader of the Conservative party in Canada, speaking at Toronto, said the Harris Commission went beyond its jurisdiction when it made the report over which there has recently been so much controversy. He said the commission was never authorized by the government to write a new constitution for Canada. It was purely a fact-finding body. He thought it was a decision for any government to delegate to any commission the task of setting up a new constitution for a country.

Fall Of Tobruk - - -

The little port of Tobruk was not very important militarily. It was used as a supply base for the Italian army in northwest Africa. It became important because of that fact and because it was one of the fortified points on the coast. There are several other centres that have to be taken before the Italians are driven out of north Africa.

Australians Again - - -

Australian troops again took a leading part in the clearing of Tobruk. They, alongside a picked British regiment, led the way and they were well supported by air and naval forces. It is one more instance of the solidarity of the Empire in this war and the value of Australia as one of the component parts of the Empire.

Turkey On The Move - - -

Turkish troops are evidently on the move. They are being transferred nearer to the scene of possible warfare. They are being used to strengthen the defences of European Turkey and may have to move farther north yet if the breathless Germans do not stop in time. The Greeks are still forcing the Italians out of Albania in spite of the strengthening of the Italian air force by German planes.

Departing Gloom - - -

Prime Minister Churchill has talked very bluntly to the people of Britain. He has not tried to deceive them by misrepresentation of any kind. Often he has been looked upon as the apostle of gloom and his "Blood and Tears" speech seemed to indicate that. Now he is assuming a more cheerful aspect. He says: "This great nation is getting into its stride." He sees the time near at hand when Britain will take the offensive on land as it has already done in the air. He says the nation is already making preparations for this move. It is a cheerful note and one we all delight to hear.

THE BRITISH COLUMBIA DISTILLERS ASSOCIATION

Masquerade At Greenville Is Fancy Affair

GREENVILLE, January 22.—For the auspices of the Greenville Improvement Association a successful and enjoyable masquerade ball was held. Practically all present were in costume and the costumes were colorful, picturesque and original. The judges—Donna Ross and Miss Marie Arsenowitch—had considerable difficulty in selecting the winners who were finally selected as follows:

Best costume—Stanley Wilson and Kenneth Cecil as a rope couple.

Most ignominious costume—Miss Nellie Calder as Jack of Diamonds.
Most original costume—Gordon McKay as a professional robber and Charles Alexander as a lone ranger.
Most comical costume—Isaac Robinson and Timothy Derrick as two sustanes.
