NAZIS TAKE OVER ITALY

Fifteen Hundred German War-planes Take Place of Fascist Air Force

LONDON, Jan. 21.— The News Chronicle says that 1500 German war planes are now stationed on Italian bases. German planes have virtually taken the place of the Italian air force, the paper says. There is every indication of an early Axis offensive in the Mediterranean under German instead of Italian direction.

POSITION OF PREMIER PATTULLO AT OTTAWA

monetary measures and other considerations.

"We are now told that it is necessary immediately to implement the recommendations of the commission in order successfully to prosecute the war. The government of British Columbia disagrees with this view and I am sorry that the winning of the war has been used as an argument prematurely to fasten upon the provinces and Dominion of Canada a change in Dominion-Provincial relations which I firmly believe will work to the injury and not to the benefit of the Dominion and the provinces of which it is composed.

"If there had been no commission, war measures would still proceed and right now without any change in our constitution, the Dominion can take any action deemed necessary to the winning of the war, and the people are solidly behind the government that every resource which we possess shall be brought into action at the earliest possible moment for the purpose of furthering our war effort.

"Let us face this question fairly and squarely just as if there were no war as was the condition at the time of the appointment of the commission, and not place those who believe that the proposals are of a harmful character under indictment that they are hindering the war effort of this Dominion. Effective temporary measures can be adopted and permanent measures can be considered with greater prudence after the war in the light of conditions then existing.

"As a matter of fact, temporary measures are being adopted by the Dominion every day. Recently, numerous foreign articles not essential for war purposes have been banned in order to protect the exchange situation. The people of Canada have been advised to economize and will be compelled to economize more and more, but this does not connote that all business outside of war services should cease. Our war services should be extended and amplified with the utmost speed, but during the process we should keep business and the public services moving in consistence therewith, while everyone capable of so doing must contribute more and more financial support as our war effort increases. For everyone immediately to stop buying everything except the barest necessities of life, while many other things which are not essential for war purposes are available, would disrupt our internal economy.

"The Income Tax would meet the law of diminishing returns for with less business there would be less income upon which to pay income tax and eventually there would follow a capital levy.

Anxious to Assist

"British Columbia is in a category by itself. This is what the commission says:

"'Although greatly affected by Canadian tariff, railway, and other economic policies, it has not been absorbed as a completely integral part of the Canadian economic system.'

"The commission also makes other observations concerning British Columbia, some of a lugubrious character which overdraws the account. But whatever may be the status of British Columbia in the economy of Canada or the state of its own internal economy, I can assure this conference that the people of British Columbia are anxious that the resources of our province shall be utilized to the full in war effort and our government will be glad to confer with the Dominion government from time to time to this end.

Would Retard War Effort

"The commission states, and I quote:

"'The immediate effect of Plan 1 on Dominion finances would be adverse, since in some degree provincial finances would have improved at the expense of those of the Dominion.'

"Inasmuch as the finances of the Dominion, according to the commission, are not immediately to be improved but the reverse, it does not seem logical to suggest that the implementation of the recommendation of the commission is essential to our war effort. Rather does it suggest that during the period of the war the implementation of the plan will be a burden on the Dominion's war effort, not alone through the assumption of additional financial obligations but through the time and effort which must necessarily be expended in the setting up of the new organization as proposed by the commission. It would seem the part of wisdom to get on with the war and postpone as far reaching and contentious problem until after the war.

Time Inopportune

"It is reiterated that this is no time to make so radical a change as proposed by the commission. We do not know what conditions will be after the war. After the war we shall be in a much more favorable position to come to wise conclusions with much better knowledge of needs and requirements. I do not think that the provinces should be asked hurriedly to put their imprimatur upon these proposals.

"I make these general observations, Mr. Chairman, with deep respect and grave concern."
