Tough On Japanese . . .

Just about at the time when the Japanese expected to take advantage of the Kudos to be gained from the taking of Moscow by the Germans by making a sudden and treacherous attack on the United States and British territory, German forces began to retreat in Russia and have been retreating steadily since. Also the Germans have been getting the worst of the fighting in North Africa so their German Kudos is now questionable. is somewhat on a parallel with the Italian move in attacking Britain just at a time when it seemed sure to them that Britain was out of the fighting picture.

For a brief period the British and American forces may be fighting a losing battle in the Pacific but the big thing today is following up the victories in Russia and North Africa. Once that job is done it will be easy enough to retrieve the Asian losses.

Should both Hong Kong and Singapore be taken the losses will not be irreparable. It will simply mean two fortresses temporarily lost. The territorial gain for Japan will be very small. And it is quite possible that the British may yet hold out for some time at any rate.

Wonderful Drive . . .

The drive of the Russians, aided by the severe Russian weather, is a wonderful indication of how history repeats itself. Napoleon became puffed up as a result of his successes and was driven out of the country by the severe wintry weather and the courage of a people inured to the intense cold. His army was destroyed. Hitler refused to learn a lesson from history and seemed to consider himself greater than nature much as did King Canute when he ordered the tide to recede.

It is not belittling the Russians in any way when we suggest that they were aided by the wintry weather. Doubtless the scorched earth policy had a good deal to do with the German collapse and that was the good generalship of the Russians. To that must also be added the efforts of the British to send aid in the way of tanks and airplanes and aviators. Also the extension of the lease-lend plan to Russia was, doubtless, effective.

If the British and American forces find themselves lacking some of the supplies in the opening days of the Pacific war, it will be well worth the cost.
