HAPPY IN AIR FORCE

Duties Arduous but Girls Contented
On Air Stations

By MARGARET ECKER
Canadian Press Staff Writer
ST. HUBERT, Que., Dec. 14 (C)— Life on an air station gets into the blood or anyway, that's what most airwomen think.

Take Cpl. Fay Hunter of Edmonton. This little corporal has lived and worked at St. Hubert for nearly a year now. She was in the original contingent of the Women's division which moved into No. 13 Service Flying Training School in mid-winter.

"I wouldn't go back to the city for anything," she said. Fay is secretary to one of the chief instructors and she takes dictation out in the control tower, with training planes whirring up from the runway under her window every few minutes.

St. Hubert is pretty much an average station. There is a large group of airwomen here. They act as messwomen, timekeepers in the control tower, clerks, telephone operators, equipment workers, parachute riggers, motor transport drivers, hospital and dental assistants.

But life isn't all duck soup here on the banks of the St. Lawrence.
Sometimes a blizzard wind nearly blows you off the runway. The landing field gets cold with snow and the roads clogged with mud.

It couldn't very well be a spit-and-polish station—but it seems to be a happy station.

"We all have a lot of fun here," said Assistant Section Officer Pat Watson of Toronto, one of the senior officers. "The girls enjoy their work. They don't seem to mind how long they're on the job.
The transport drivers take any shifts they're asked to. The telephone operators run the switchboard in shifts 24 hours a day." One good example of what fun air station life can be was the little girl who wasn't there, Cpl.
Pat Price of Moncton, N.B. She was up for a flip," said Flying Officer G. E. Refell of New York.
"She'd like to go up every day if she could, she's crazy about flying," added FO J. Round of Saint John, N.B. "She works hard. She deserves any fun she gets."

Does Man's Job

According to the officers, Pat is about the whole control tower.
She takes messages from the planes on the wireless; she transmits weather reports, sends flight messages over the teletype, keeps records of the arrival and departure of every plane—and can recognize practically every plane and airman, in the air or on the ground. She fires the Verey pistol to signal planes if the runway is clear for a landing and looks after the rockets that are sent up to direct airport traffic.

"And is she popular?" said FO Refell. "I guess she has more dates than she can handle, but she doesn't bother with anyone while she's on duty."

Pat doesn't sound like a girl who would want to trade her air force job for a civilian one very quickly.
Airwoman Mildred Griffin of Neidpath, Sask., is another who wouldn't trade, even if there isn't much excitement in her job. Mildred is a cook, especially trained to work in the hospital kitchen.

"I like making things that will make people get better," she said.
"And it's fun fixing up trays so some airman will want to eat, even if he doesn't really feel like it. I wouldn't want to work anywhere else. Life on an air station is swell."
