War Babies . . .

Should parents fear to have more children now because of the danger and insecurity caused by the greatest of history's wars?

From coast to coast they are raising that query. The question was aid before two well known authorities.

First was Mrs. Sidonie Gruenberg, head of the Child Study Association and author of "We, the Parents," which won the 1940 Parents Magazine award for outstanding service to parents and the home.

Second was Mrs. Margaret Sanger, head of the American Federation of Birth Control, who has battled for years—and even been in jail—for her beliefs that women should have freedom to control the size of their families.

They swung to bat on the question, with answers diametrically opposed.

Build For Future . . .

"There are more reasons than ever for having children now," said Mrs. Gruenberg, who is the mother of four (two sons are physicians) and the grandmother of two. "Children are going to build the future—and it must be good. The world is ill now, but that does not mean that it cannot recover. Much of the recovery depends on a strong youth, which will help build a better world."

"Hitler never could have come to power if it had not been for the restlessness and despair of the youth of Germany over the bleak outlook it faced following the last war. Hitler has taught us that the earth cannot have sick spots and remain well. If we don't have children and build up a strong youth for the future, we shall be a sick spot ourselves."

"Besides I don't believe there is a valid reason for swinging away from normal. My children were born about the time of the first World War when we believed the world was being made safe for democracy. Twenty-five years have shown that we were wrong in that assumption. It's just as reasonable to assume that the black outlook which many people see now is not a correct calculation either. So I see no valid reason for fearing to have children now."

Mental Hazards . . .

Mrs. Sanger, child of a large family, the mother of two physician sons and a daughter who died at five, gave her views on the question as follows:

"It is a very bad time to have children," she said. "There are three reasons. First, people worried about the future—the tendency is to have a serious attitude about the insecurity of the future. Such a feeling creates a wrong condition under which to have children. It's a known fact that many of the children born in the United States after their parents' arrival from Europe as immigrants have had mental retardation because of the mental insecurity of the parents upon their arrival."

"Second, glandular upsets of the mothers during the period of worry and anxiety affect the unborn child."

"And finally, in case the children should be born healthy, we have the nutrition question, to say nothing of the mental atmosphere of deprivation in the home."

"Every mother in this country who wants to have a healthy normal child should wait until there is assurance of security for the child and parents too."

Dr. Gruenberg has an answer to the question of adequate nutrition for wartime babies:

"I believe that it is part of national defence," she said, "to establish milk stations and school lunches to make sure that children born in wartime should have adequate food."

New Montreal Munitions Plant Will Be Used For That Purpose
After War

MONTREAL, March 17: — The extensive plant of National Railways Munitions Limited, now in production, is situated on the Canadian National Railways at the foot of Congregation Street at Point St. Charles and adjoins the large locomotive shops and car shops of the national Railways.

The building is so designed that when the war is over, it can immediately become, without alteration, the car repair shop for the railway, replacing the presence group of structures.

The new shop measures 505 feet by 513 feet and is laid out in eight longitudinal bays. Foundation and walls to a height of five feet above the ground are of reinforced concrete with brick walls above. The frame is of structural steel and the roof of laminated timber construction. Ample natural light is provided from wall windows, skylights and monitor sash. The total area of glass in the walls is 33,000 square feet in the skylight 64,000 square feet amounting to approximately 25 percent of the whole area.

The construction of the foundations were begun December 26

1940, and the plant was in actual production at the beginning of this year.

On the occasion of Saturday's official inspection, Hon. C. D.

Howe and other ministers were welcomed to the plant by R. C.

Vaughan, president of the Canadian National Railways, who was accompanied by R. N. Walton vice-president of Trans-Canada

Air Lines; John Roberts, managing director, National Railways

Munitions, Limited and L. H. Bexon, superintendent of the plant.
