WOMEN GO ON GUARD

Britain Making Rady For Possible Winter Raids On Large Scale By Nazi Air Forces

By FOSTER BARCLAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, Sept. 16 (CP)—The Government, fearful of large-scale German raids when fighting bogs down in Russia this winter, has taken determined steps to mobilize all available man and woman power for fire-watching duties throughout the country.

Ever since the Nazis ceased heavy raids to turn on Russia the Government has continued with vigor a campaign to keep the public primed for the time when incendiaries and high explosives might again be scattered over towns and cities. Keynote of the campaign has been the motto: "Britain Shall Not Burn."

Foster Barclay

This message has been spread through the nation by huge posters in flaming colors depicting incendiary bombs with clutching fingers of fire.

Women Register

Every male civilian has been enrolled in a fire guard, an organization incorporated in the Air Raid Wardens' Service, intended to defeat incendiaries by dealing with fire bombs as they fall. Now women from 20 to 45 have been required for fire-watching duty wherever officials designate.

Exemption will be given to persons working exceptionally long hours, physically unfit or enrolled in other civil defence duties. Women will not be asked to fire-watch in the City of London, but may be compelled to take a place alongside men in business areas of large provincial cities as well as residential areas.

Orders have been circulated to local authorities to train men and women thoroughly on methods of dealing with different kinds of fire bombs; use and maintenance of fire-fighting equipment and use of hydrants.

One of the first questions which arose when the registration was published concerned mixed fire parties. The Government was asked if women serving on such parties should be chaperoned.

After pondering the question Herbert Morrison, Minister of Home Security, decided to draw up a "code" for fire girls, including a provision that middle-aged women act as "supervisors" to "keep an eye" on behavior.

Don't Like "Coding"

Women didn't like this a bit and the Married Women's Association bluntly declared that men, too, should be "supervised." The Association also had a sharp retort for the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce which said that "temperamentally and physically women aren't suitable to perform fire duties," and protested to the Government against exposing women to the "moral laxity" it claimed existed in some cities during raids.

An official of the Association summed up:—"When our grandmothers helped their men in the pioneer days there was no talk of such nonsense. They had a job to do and they got on with it—all on an equal footing.

Stewart Woman Helps Hospital With Philately

STEWART, Sept. 16:—For some time now Mrs. H. C. Bennett of Stewart has been collecting used postage stamps and sending them to the Children's Hospital, London, England. Stamps are little things and used postage stamps involve soaking to remove envelope paper, sorting and packaging. Yet Mrs. Bennet has now sent a hundred thousand stamps in to the hospital. Working quietly and patiently Mrs. Bennett has nevertheless aroused considerable interest in her work and she receives parcels of stamps from places as far apart as Florida and Ketchikan, Alaska.

Used stamps — the average stamps do not appear to be very valuable material, yet this hospital made $5000 out of used stamps last year.
