The feeling of the meeting was that only a socialist system and a socialist government, not only for Germany but for the whole of Europe, could ensure peace.

The new government of Germany would have to agree to some form of international control of the country until the old enemy of peace and freedom was completely rooted out and the new Germany, after a period of re-education in the ideals of democracy and freedom, was firmly established as one of the Federated Socialist Republics of Europe.

Who Are the Guilty Ones? In dealing with the question of war guilt it was pointed out that not only the war mongers of Germany, Japan and Italy must be held responsible for this war but the financiers, industrialists and capitalists governments of whatever nation supplied them with financial aid and unlimited war materials which they used.

Mrs. S. Roper, one of the ladies participating in the discussion, contended that, if peace was to be maintained in the world, the new society to be created after the war must be able to abolish poverty and want in the midst of plenty. In addition to the rights of free speech, the right to vote, etc., people must also be assured the right to work and the right to enjoy a decent living standard.

Other members taking part in the discussion, however, expressed the opinion that these aims could not be realized under the capitalstic system and that the only hope for permanent peace and a better world was the establishment of socialism the world over.
