The Retailer's Wife...

It has been said that every great business is but the shadow of a man. The biggest industrial and trading company in the world—that of Lever Brothers and an associ- The old habit of putting in the ated Dutch company-is the projection, all over the globe, of William Hesketh Lever's shadow.

Lever didn't have much schooling. In his mid-teens things were planted too soon. The he joined his father, a grocer in a small way, in Bolton, sulted in a feast of fresh garden England.
