CAREER OF WOODSWORTH

Started in Winnipeg and Was All Over West.

Young J. S. Woodsworth, who later became a leading Socialist and parliamentarian and is now dead in Vancouver, came west with the family in 1882, attended school at Portage la Prairie and Brandon, and then entered Wesley College, Winnipeg. He played on the senior rugby squad, and in his final year was elected "senior stick." Upon graduating with his arts degree he was awarded the bronze medal in mental and moral sciences. After teaching school for a year he completed his theology course, and served mission fields in Manitoba. In 1893 he entered Victoria College, Toronto, taking his bachelor of divinity degree, and then followed two years post-graduate study at Oxford University.

Returning to Manitoba in 1900, he was assigned mission charges in New Ontario, Saskatchewan and British Columbia. His first appointment of note was that of junior minister of Grace Church, Winnipeg, the most important Methodist congregation in the west at that time. He remained at this post four years, and was then appointed superintendent of All Peoples' Mission in Winnipeg. During six years in this office he studied social problems, particularly immigration, upon which he wrote a book. Believing his views to be out of harmony with the objectives of his denomination, he resigned from the church; but a church committee reported his beliefs were sufficiently in harmony with Methodist standards to render his resignation unnecessary, and his name was retained on the ministerial list.

During his ministerial days in Winnipeg, Mr. Woodsworth was a member of the Children's Aid Society, Associated Charities Committee, Playgrounds Commission, Commission on Technical Education, and the Trades and Labor Council, representing the Ministerial Association on the latter body. He was instrumental in organizing the "People's Forum," through which all kinds of views on current problems found expression. He organized the Canadian Welfare League, through which he hoped that the various religious and social agencies might co-ordinate their activities for sane and sympathetic assimilation of the foreigner.

In 1915 he resigned to become director of the Bureau of Social Research established in Winnipeg under the auspices of the governments of the three prairie provinces, and made a valuable survey of the Ukranian situation in the west and also reported on the problem of the care of feeble-minded children.

When the bureau was discontinued, he accepted an appointment to serve a Methodist mission field on the Pacific coast in January, 1917. In 1918 he served for three months as secretary of the Alberta Non-Partisan League at Calgary. Returning to the coast, he became a longshoreman in Vancouver and identified himself with the labor movement there.

Editor in Winnipeg.

On a speaking tour through Canada in 1919, he reached Winnipeg when the general strike was in progress. William Ivens, a Methodist minister who had resigned from his church, was then editing "The Western Labor News," the organ of the strikers. With a number of other labor leaders, Mr. Ivens was arrested on a charge of sedition and Mr. Woodsworth assumed the editorial chair. Later he, too, was arrested on a charge of inciting the holding of an unlawful assembly. The Crown failed to convict one of the other strike leaders on a similar charge, and the charge against Mr. Woodsworth was withdrawn.

After touring Canada in the interest of the Winnipeg Strike Defence Fund, he returned to British Columbia and ran as a Labor candidate, along with W. R. Trotter and Tom Richardson, in the provincial elections of 1920. He polled a big vote but was defeated.

In 1921 he reappeared in Winnipeg and was nominated as Labor candidate in Winnipeg Centre in the federal elections. He was elected and became chief spokesman of his party in the federal house. In the two succeeding elections he was returned with imposing majorities over his opponents.

In 1904 Mr. Woodsworth married Lucy L. Staples, a graduate of the University of Toronto and an accomplished speaker and writer. Six children survive, one Mrs. Grace MacInnis, a member of the British Columbia Legislature.

her own milk—fresh from the ELECTRIC REFRIGERATOR, is SAFE for her

"I don't pose as a baby specialist," says Reddy Kilowatt, "but I do know milk and know that it's good for children if — and it's a big if — it's kept fresh and sweet at proper refrigeration temperature. And that's where I come in. For an Electric Refrigerator assures the proper temperature to keep all foods fresh over lengthy periods. There's no waste. Leftovers can be made up into the tastiest dishes. And as for milk, you'll have no trouble getting the kiddies to drink plenty and you know how that builds them up."
