Prince Edward Island...

The little island province of Prince Edward Island is going to the polls today in a general provincial election. Prince Edward Island is a long way from here but the contest there will have some measure of interest for political observers generally even though the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, which has been cutting such a swath throughout the country lately, may not be very fully represented. The C.C.F. has yet to break very seriously into the political picture of the Maritimes but recent events in Ontario and Quebec have indicated progress in that direction by the Socialist party.

Though the Liberal government's mandate was not due to expire until next year, the calling of a 1943 general election took no one by surprise in Prince Edward Island.

Both the major political parties for months had been getting their battle lines drawn for the contest.

The C.C.F., still in the formation stage in the island province, had not put up any candidates before the election date announcement but the third-party group quickly swung into action.

Both the opposition groups were critical of the way the election was called. Opposition Leader W. J. P. MacMillan, drawing attention to the time between dissolution and voting day, declared the government was "trying for a snap verdict, allowing only the time provided by law to discuss their unsavory record."

For the C.C.F., Provincial Secretary Douglas McFarlane charged the election had been called at this time to "prevent the C.C.F. from getting a start." He declared the outcome of the Ontario general election—where the C.C.F. made big strides—had precipitated this election.

Premier Jones, who took office only last May, retorted that it was usual for a new premier to seek a mandate and lay his policies before the people. Also, he declared, three by-elections would have to be held in any case, and these would cause "almost as much disturbance" as a general contest, which would have to be held early in 1944 anyway.

AMERICANS WIN GAME

Only One Run in Inter-Service Softball League Play-off.

With Southworth on second and one game in the first half of the seventh, Americans' Ambrose hammered a long double into left field and Southworth thundered into pay dirt with the winning and only run of the game in service softball last night.

The contest, which was played between the Air Force Flyers and Port Edward Americans, as part of the Inter-Service play-offs, was closely fought and, like Monday night's struggle, had all the earmarks of going into extra innings. Up to the seventh, it was practically a case of three men up—three men down.

The Flyers had a glorious chance to score in the fourth when Whittaker and Volsky opened with singles. O'Leary followed with a hopping grounder to Southworth at short who attempted to force Whittaker at third. But third sacker Ketchmark interfered with the runner and home umpire Mahl called him safe. But all this effort was in vain. While the cushions were jammed with potential runs, and none down, Brown forced Whittaker at the plate and then the Yanks pulled off the most beautiful fielding gem of the evening when Crymble lined to Ambrose who doubled Volsky off third with a clothes-line peg to Ketchmark to end the inning and ominous threat.

In the fifth, the Flyers again broke out in a rash. One was away when Benes hit the canteen roof for a two-ply smash. But Anderson and O'Connell rolled out, leaving Benes stranded at third.

Then came the fateful seventh—and Ambrose. But the Seal Cove men went down fighting to the very end. In their half, Brown, first man up, flied out, but Crymble lit a spark when he punched one of Kuntz's pitches through short. Hornidge caused the spark to glow a little brighter when he rolled out, advancing Crymble to second. Tall, husky-shouldered, heavy-hitting Benes strode up to the plate to do or die for the boys in blue. American strategy went into a huddle and decided to give the strapping Air Force man a free ticket to first and get at Anderson instead. Benes let the first bad toss go by, then quickly thinking that the Americans would be expecting him to do likewise for the next three, lunged at the next pitch, hoping to catch them off guard. It was a smart gamble but it didn't work. He snotted the sphere down to short for the final put-out and threat of a close double between two evenly matched nines.

There was very little to choose between Crymble and Kuntz; for former gave away three hits, and struck out seven; the latter issued five hits, and whiffed two. Both sides got a double apiece, and both played errorless ball.

MRS. BRYANT IS PRESIDENT

The monthly meetings of the Prince Rupert Chapter of the B. C. Registered Nurses' Association were resumed Monday night when the chapter met in the Nurses' Home of the Prince Rupert General Hospital with Mrs. O. L. Murray in the chair.

Following the routine business and committee reports, the resignation of Miss Eleanor Graham, the former president, who has left for Powell River, was accepted with regret. Mrs. Gordon Bryant was elected president by acclamation and Miss Ann Murray elected vice-president.

An appeal was heard requesting as many nurses as possible to turn out for the Monday evening Red Cross meetings held in the City Hall.

The next regular meeting will be held in the Nurses' Home October 4.
