Custody of Boys' Band Property

Some Doubt as to Who is Responsible—Committee to Look Into It

A committee of the city council will check up on property of the now inactive Prince Rupert Boys' Band in regard to the responsibility for disposition of the equipment of which there appears to be some uncertainty The matter came up at last night's council meeting when H G. Helgerson Ltd. in a letter advised that it would be necessary to have a pile of uniforms removed from the Japanese Mission Hall which the custodian of Japanese property is using for storage purposes. The communication pointed out that some music had been turned over to the Prince Rupert Machine Gun Regiment which had already received the band's instruments.

While it was realized that the instruments and music would be in responsible hands with the regiment, Ald. Black raised the point as to the authority on which the property had been turned over. After discussion, it was decided to have the matter looked into by a committee.
