Canada's Services Weak in Many Ways Says Writer Rounding-up Security Plans of Various Countries

In what he terms "a reconnaissance survey of a very large problem," Harry M. Cassidy, Ph.D., professor of social welfare, University of California, outlines a proposal for "Social Security and Reconstruction in Canada" (Ryerson). His book is interesting reading for students of present-day and post-war economic problems.

It outlines the present social security set-ups of the Dominion, the United States, New Zealand, Great Britain, and Sir William Beveridge's plan for post-war Britain, and suggests the outline of a plan to meet Canada's needs.

Professor Cassidy's outline gains interest in view of the recent report on social security for the Dominion which was presented to the parliamentary committee on social security by Dr. Leonard C. Marsh. Dr. Marsh's report was issued too late for comment in the book.

Prof. Cassidy says "Canada's services are backward and weak in many respects" by contrast with many other social security systems, and that building an adequate system "will be even more difficult in Canada than in many other countries."

The book outlines the findings of various commissions in the Dominion—including the report on Dominion-provincial relations by Rowells-Sirois Commission.

Some Expectations

Prof. Cassidy says there are two major premises. First the social security program must be supplementary to a national economic policy aiming at full employment and agricultural prosperity. "The social security system should not be expected to do the impossible. Unemployment amounting to 25 or 30 per cent of the working force, accompanied by widespread rural depression, is likely to put impossible strains upon the best system of social services."

The second major premise is that money can be found for an adequate program of social security.

SISTERS IN FILM

Barbara Stanwyck Heads Cast in Picture "Gay Sisters," at Capitol Theatre

"The Gay Sisters," story of three supposedly wealthy sisters, who are theoretically worth a fortune but are actually up to their necks in debt, comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre as the feature offering this Friday and Saturday. Barbara Stanwyck, Geraldine Fitzgerald and Nancy Coleman play the parts of the sisters and George Brent is the man who has contested their father's will and has managed to keep the case in the various courts for twenty years in the hope that they will be forced to sell him their property. There is an aura of mystery surrounding the girls until the day the entire thrilling story is exploded in one mighty blast.

An excellent supporting cast includes Donald Crisp, Gene Lockhart, Larry Simms and Donald Woods.

TROPHIES PRESENTED

The Ladies' Bowling League activities for the season were brought to a pleasant close last night with an affair at the Knox Hotel dining room when the feature of the proceedings was the presentation of trophies for the past winter's play. The presentations were made by the president of the league, Mrs. P. L. Peterson, as follows:

Team championship — Savoy Swingers, winners of both halves, received by the Captain, Miss Rose LaBelle.

High single game — Miss Edna Harris of Blue Birds, 423, also a trophy given by C. Chappell.

High average — Miss Bessie Reaugh, Savoy Swingers, 226.

Consolation cup — Nursing Sisters.

To conclude the evening there was dancing for the ladies and the escorts. Refreshments were served buffet style.
