"Forever and a Day" Coming to

Capitol Theatre This Wednesnesday and Thursday

With an engrossing story covering a century and a third of English history and an unusually distinguished cast of screen luminaries, "Forever and a Day," entertaining and replete with colorful incident and deft characterization, comes to the Capitol Theatre here

A sturdy old English home, built in 1804 by the fiery Admiral Trimble, is the axis about which the story turns. The lives and loves, joys and troubles of various generations of the old admiral's descendants furnish material for the different episodes that occur from that time up to the Luftwaffe raids it, serve to introduce the plot and carry it over the intervals between the episodes. It is these two who, after the bombing, decide to rebuild the old place together if they can help to make a new world where homes and human lives will

Did Not Take Any Chances in Applying for Driver's Licence "I want to be examined for a a police station, without a licence driver's licence," he told the constable at the desk.

"Have you a car?" he asked. The young man replied that he had a car.

"Then we'll see how you drive it." month of May this year totalled said the constable.

He put on his cap and went out into the street. He looked up and down but nowhere in the block was there a vehicle except the force's own deep blue Maria.

In answer to blunt questions the young man replied that his car was at home. Naturally he lacked the crust to drive to, of all places,
