How We Can Better City . . .

There is much to complain of in Prince Rupert. There is much that isn't right and some things that are downright bad for it wouldn't be a city if the devil didn't have a hand in it somewhere. But leaving the devil out of it, no city can triple its population in two years and maintain complete balance.

Part of the trouble with the town is that, having experienced a war expansion, it has had to wear the same set of breeches tailored for it during the lean depression years. Those breeches had become ragged and threadbare before the town started to expand but they still fitted it. Now its increased girth has split them open in so many places that a lot of new i cloth is needed for their repair,

The physical aspects of our civic distress are plain. Our streets, pounded to crumbling asphalt by heavy truck traffic, have been insufficiently maintained, housing is inadequate, entertainment facilities are very inadequate. Insufficient medical and sanitary coverage has resulted in a higher incidence of communicable diseases than any other city in the province, our schools are so crowded that there is no room in them for some of our children. These and other conditions combine to inspire an aroma which meets tonight in the has the flavor, if not the strength, of the odor overhanging some of the American war-crowded centres.

The initial instinct is to ask: Who is to blame! the University of British Colum-That question is not for us to answer but it is for us bia Extension Department and B.C. Ideas are never so plentiful that they become a drug on the market like recriminations.

An opportunity for a display of civic interest is at hand now.
