Gone

We well remember when Musso did crow, When he shipped his troops to Africa Ho.

To have an empire of his making How he maimed and slaughtered in the taking.

Against defenceless people his army did go. Musso, appearing on the balcony, did always blow.

His Italian Empire is no more, But the worst for him is still in store.

Men like him, when they talk with might, Should always make sure they're behind the right.
 —HUGH S. CARNIE.

Job's Daughters Social Evening

Enjoyable Affair Friday Night Prior to Suspension for Summer Months

With Masons, Eastern Star members and parents attending, the local Job's Daughters Bethel had an enjoyable social evening at the Masonic Temple Friday night to mark the suspension of regular gatherings for the summer holiday months. There was a good attendance.

The evening's program included the playing of novel and entertaining games, dancing and finals in a quiz contest. There were acceptable vocal solos by Sergeant Glen Scarvie, accompanied by Mrs. E. J. Smith, while Miss Janet Rochester played piano solos.

Delicious refreshments were served.

Fishermen Of Skeena River

It's night!—but to us on the Skeena Another long day is begun. A day with no definite beginning It goes on from sun to sun.

For we are the ones who are fishing Awaiting the "Silvery Hordes," That lighten our tasks of their burden And lift us to heights of lords.

Around me the boats are all drifting A miniature city it seems, The waters now calm and sparkling While above the silvery moon beams.

Again there are nights of blackness Nights when the waves run high, Nights when the winds are howling And not a star in the sky.

Still we go on with our fishing Hundreds in number are we Struggling for dear independence Love of the life of the free.

Some say its the "call of the ocean" The tang of the salt-laden air, Romance of the home-coming salmon, Keep us all fishing here.

Here and there cheery voices will greet you Their password "how goes it today?"

When the nets are all in we'll make coffee, Rest and talk for an hour in some bay.

We are people from many a nation Some have come from a far away strand But if fighting for right, or fishing Canadians, united we stand.
 —FISHERMAN'S WIFE.

KILLED BY PROPELLER

LONDON, June 5 (P)—Sgt. W. C. Haldiman, R.A.F., lived eight hours after being nearly cut in half on an East Anglian airdrome by the propeller of an aircraft taking off. The airman's spine was fractured, and doctors said it was extraordinary that he lived so long.
