KINCOLITH GUERILLAS

Visit From Officer in Charge of Training is Welcomed

KINCOLITH, March 4—The Pacific Coast Militia Rangers of the Naas River (No. 130 Coy.) received a visit last week from Capt. Kennelly, officer in charge of training of all Pacific Coast Militia Ranger

On his arrival in the Indian Department boat, Naskeena, the Rangers and officers paraded to the wharf, accompanied by the Kincolith Concert Band and the local Red Cross group. Capt. Kennelly was introduced by James Gillett, Indian Agent, and an address of welcome was made by A L. Nelson, intelligence officer.

The captain expressed his surprise and gratification to find that the local unit had progressed so far since its organization last

The whole company then marchejed through the village.

In the evening a meeting was held in the Recreational Hall. Practically all Rangers belonging to the Kincolith detachment were present, many having travelled considerable distance from the lo- 11:30-Silent calities in which they were work- 10:30-Silent ing. "For Me and My Gal" Scores With Judy Garland in Story of Heyday of Vaudeville

Charm for lovers of vaudeville of the days before World War No. 1, entertainment for the younger generation who missed it blend in "For Me and My Gal," which presents Judy Garland in her first "really grown up role," in a cavalcade of vaudeville in its heyday with the songs it popularized. This picture comes to the Capitol Theatre here Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Teamed with Miss Garland, in his first picture, is Gene Kelly, a New York stage sensation in "Pal Joey," and George Murphy, with whom she appears in a number of typical vaudeville acts throughout the production.

While its background is vaudeville, the story itself is a poignant romance of two young players. It opens in, 1915, with Judy a rising young singer, Murphy as head of the act she appears in, and Kelly as a juggler on the same bill. They are playing small theatres, and hoping for "Big Time." Kelly comes upon a song and he and Miss Garland become partners. The act is a success. They fall in love, vow to marry when they are booked at the Palace. The first World War and a call to arms for Kelly comes on the eve of this triumph; Kelly tries to postpone his draft call by injuring his hand, and accidentally does so permanently. Judy, who has lost a mistice they play the Palace as ists in "Spell of the Waltz" a brother in the war, renounces him and goes abroad as an entertainer. Kelly follows, and through hero-
